Balloon Drags Boy On Terror Ride 3,000 Feet Above Marin

AWFUL MOMENT—Twelve-year-old Danny Nowell rises on the end of thin rope beneath an amateur balloon launched from Tennessee Valley today. He was hanging 10 to 15 minutes and rose to 3,000 feet, before the balloonist saw him and came down. (I-J photos by Jim Kean)

Crowd Weeps, Prays During Long Ordeal

The carnival atmosphere surrounding a balloon launching in Tennessee Valley turned to stark terror this morning when a 12-year-old boy was caught in a rope and lifted 3,000 feet into the air.

Women fell to their knees and prayed, grown men cried and other spectators shouted and yelled themselves hoarse as an amateur balloonist continued aloft, unaware of the boy hanging 75 feet beneath him.

Danny Nowell, son of Lt. Col. Thomas E. Nowell of Apt. C. Building 20, Villa Garden Drive, Tennessee Valley, was one of several willing helpers at the launching.

He was holding one of four nylon guide ropes that kept the balloon on the ground. None of his friends were aware that Danny had tied the rope around his left wrist.

When balloonist William Berry, 36, of Concord, signalled for his volunteer helpers to let go, the balloon rose as all lines except Danny's were released.

As 75 spectators watched in horror Danny was pulled up after the rapidly rising balloon.

Berry heard the shouting but did not immediately realize there was trouble. Danny was hanging directly below his seat, hidden from his vision.

Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean, one of the horror-struck observers, said no one realized the boy had tied the rope to his wrist.

"We all feared the boy was only holding on and would soon have to let go," Kean said. "It looked as if he would drop to his death at any moment.

"Men were crying and women fell down praying. It was the worst thing I've ever seen," Kean said.

Kean said parents had to help sobbing, limp children to cars parked along the Maule V. Lopez Ranch where the launching took place.

The balloon went up at about 10:20 a.m. At 3,000 feet and about 10 minutes later, Berry realized he had Danny as a passenger. Berry immediately made a rapid descent by cutting the fans that force hot air into the nylon balloon.

He came down in the back yard of the Robert Dewalt home at 537 Browning Court, in Tamalpais Valley, about two miles from the launching site.

Danny was rushed to Marin General Hospital by Marin Ambulance, arriving here at 10:46 a.m. He was suffering from shock and a left hand that was blue from prolonged loss of circulation, Tamalpais Valley firemen said. At 11:30 a.m. Danny was rushed to Letterman Hospital in San Francisco.

NWP Is Ordered To Repair Tunnel

A panel of three federal judges ruled in San Francisco yesterday that the Northwestern Pacific Railroad must rebuild the Puerto Suello Tunnel and restore regular rail service to Southern Marin.

The ruling came a week after a hearing before the three judges in which the railroad was charged with deliberate delay.

The U.S. District Court judges, headed by Judge A. J. Zirpoli upheld an Interstate Commerce Commission order that the tunnel be opened. NWP, in its appeal to the federal court, was trying to have the ICC ruling set aside on grounds that there was not sufficient evidence for the decision.

But the federal judges said there was substantial evidence to support the ICC finding that "there is sufficient need for rail service" in the area south of the tunnel.

The court also agreed that the railroad would not suffer any long-run financial losses by rebuilding the tunnel. Cost of the project has been estimated as high as $870,000.

The tunnel collapsed after a fire July 20, 1961. Yesterday's ruling was another step in the long struggle by Marin County, several of its cities and firms to get rail service restored.

Attorney Boris H. Lakusta, who has represented the local interest both before the ICC and again before the federal panel last Friday, said today he presumed the railroad would take its case to the U.S. Supreme Court, its next and final step.

He estimated that such an appeal would consume another six to eight months.

"If that court rules against them," Lakusta said, "they will have to get busy with the bulldozers to repair the tunnel."

The court ruled yesterday that there was no issue of confiscation involved and the claim raised by the railroad that losses would be involved boiled down only to a question of "degree of profits."

During the hearing last Friday the railroad was accused of delaying opening of the tunnel because rerouting of cars from the Tiburon barge landing was an advantage to the parent Southern Pacific Co. in its competition with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe.

Yesterday's ruling against the railroad was not much of a surprise. Judge Zirpoli pointedly questioned railroad attorney Randolph Karr during the hearing and told him his appeal should be centered on public need and necessity rather than on degree of profits for the railroad.

Other judges who heard the case were W. T. Sweigert and James R. Browning. Their decision was issued in an 11-page report.

Bay Area People Die In Jetliner Air Crash

BAHRAIN ISLAND (UPI) — A Middle East Airlines jetliner with 49 persons aboard, including 23 Americans, was found today in the Persian Gulf where it had crashed in 18 feet of water while trying to land at Dhahran Airport in a blinding sandstorm.

Authorities feared all aboard were dead, but U. S. Navy helicopters and rescue ships searched the waters in the faint hope that some might have survived. There was no sign of life.

Most of the American passengers were employees of the Arabian American Oil Co. (ARAMCO) and their dependents, en route to ARAMCO's operating headquarters at Dhahran in Saudi Arabia.

The victims included several executives of the oil firm.

The plane, a twin-jet French-built Caravelle, took off from Beirut, Lebanon, at 7:30 p.m. yesterday on a regularly scheduled 1,000-mile flight across the Arabian desert to Dhahran.

The pilot sent his last message to Dhahran airport at 9:30 p.m., three minutes before scheduled landing.

Others included Robert Keith Souders 39, of Montebello, Calif., editor of the ARAMCO newspaper "Sun and Flare," his wife Verniz, 38, and their son, Derek, 7; William A. Scott, 39, of Pittsburg, Kan., ARAMCO public relations manager at Dhahran; Ralph Henry Devenney, 48, of Napa, Calif., ARAMCO's general manager of Industrial relations; William Kelly Jewell, 55, of Napa, Calif., wages coordinator, and Dr. Frank Joseph Zukoski, 48, of Scranton, Pa., medical director of the Trans-Arabian Pipeline (TAPLINE), at Beirut. TAPLINE carries ARAMCO oil.

Other Americans were Mrs. Marjorie Baumgartner, 40, of San Jose, Calif. and her daughter, Jane. Mrs. Baumgartner's husband, F. L. Baumgartner, is ARAMCO's supervisor of communications. He was not aboard.

Sen. Engle Reported Injured

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ailing Sen. Clair Engle—his health is a key issue in the 12-way race for the Democratic senatorial nomination—suffered a slight injury in tripping over a rug at his Washington, D.C. home, a San Francisco newspaper said today.

The newspaper said Engle's wife, Lucretia, confirmed the fall in a telephone conversation, would not say what day it happened, but asserted her husband did not go to a hospital. (See photo, page 2.)

Engle, who underwent exploratory brain surgery last August, is seeking re-election, saying his doctor has given him health clearance.

Monday in the Senate chamber, Engle arose to introduce a resolution but managed to utter only a syllable. Another senator read his remarks.

Engle's arm was in a sling and two aides had helped him to his feet. The aides later escorted him from the chamber.

The paper said Mrs. Engle was reluctant to discuss the fall.

3 Records Broken At Swim Meet

Three Pacific Assn. Amateur Union records were broken this morning as more than 250 youngsters from throughout California converged on the new Bon Air Recreation Center pool in Greenbrae for the first annual Marin Swimming Championships.

The record smashers were Susan Pedersen of Arden Hills who swam the 50-meter freestyle for girls 9-10 years of age in 31.5 seconds; Dean Anderson, entered unattached, also 31.5 seconds in the 50-meter free for boys 9-10; and Karen Doyle, unattached, in the 100 meter free for girls 11-12 in the time of 1 minute, 7.5 seconds.

Competition opened today and will continue all day tomorrow under the joint sponsorship of Schultz Enterprises, the Marin Pirates Swim Club and the Independent-Journal.

Sally Keeps Up Fight —Demanding Recount

Mrs. Marsha Owen, unsuccessful candidate in last Tuesday's city council race in Sausalito, announced today she will demand a recount, claiming her opponents "pulled every dirty trick in the book."

A meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Monday, in the IDESST Hall on Caledonia Street to gain support for Mrs. Owen (Sally Stanford) who wishes to be appointed to the upcoming vacant seat of Mayor Paul Micou.

Micou plans to resign from the council Tuesday. He is taking a post as foreign service reserve officer in Washington, D.C., with the Agency for International Development.

When a councilman leaves office prior to the end of his term, the procedure is for the rest of the council to appoint a person to fill the empty seat.

Richard Christian, campaign manager for Mrs. Owen in the recent race, claims the precedent in cities across the nation is to take the next runnerup in the election when a vacancy occurs at the time of the election. (Mrs. Owen came in fourth with 689 votes Tuesday. Those winning candidates were Carl W. Gabrielson, incumbent, 1,244 votes; Melvin S. Wax, 1,049 and Eleanor O'Hara Chapin, 855.)

"It would probably be good political wisdom to appoint the next closest candidate (from the election race)," said County Clerk George H. Gnoss when questioned by the Independent-Journal, "but there is no precedent of this and I cannot recall any similar situation," he said.

The reason for calling for a recount, Mrs. Owen explained, is that, "I fought a clean campaign and didn't say a wrong thing but these people have pulled every dirty trick in the book.

"They called merchants and threatened them with economic boycott if they continued to support me. They called one resident and when she was not at home, asked her 14-year-old daughter, 'Did you know your mother used to work for Sally Stanford?' And they had crews of people pulling bumper stickers off bumpers and replacing them with opposition stickers."

Mrs. Owen said she is working with her attorneys to take immediate action to demand a recount. It is not that she believes the count is wrong, said Christian, but to call citizens attention to the underhanded methods used in the campaign.

"I will urge all people who supported Mrs. Owen," said Christian, "to sign a petition to urge to ask the city council to appoint Marsha Owen for the duration of Micou's term."

Kremlin Again Blasts Chinese

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Kremlin launched another broadside against the Chinese Communists today as East European Communist leaders here for Premier Nikita Khrushchev's 70th birthday celebrations returned home from a summit meeting that never took place.

The Communist leaders of Poland, Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Bulgaria and Romanian Premier Ion Gheorghe Maurer left with no public indications they were agreed on tactics in the explosive Sino-Soviet dispute.

As they left, the Communist Party's theoretical organ Kommunist attacked the Chinese for "nationalistic blindness," a "petty bourgeois, Trotskyite, adventurous approach to events" and twisting Karl Marx's teachings to justify a schism in world Communism.

Rights Bill Changes Studied By Kennedy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy huddled today with Senate leaders on the civil rights bill to go over carefully 10 changes Sen. Everett Dirksen (R-Ill.) has introduced to the measure's fair employment section.

Dirksen introduced his first 10 amendments to the fair employment section on Thursday. He still has not dropped in his most controversial proposal however — relating to greater state authority in enforcement of the section.

LBJ Denies Nuclear Cutbacks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Lyndon B. Johnson embarked today on a new initiative toward easing cold war problems with Russia but he denied publicly that one phase will be a cutback in production of U.S. nuclear materials.

Nonetheless, in the past 24 hours, it was learned from reliable authorities that the administration has been considering a plan to further reduce U. S. production of enriched uranium, the basic stuff of nuclear weapons, and to call on the Russians to take similar action.

Published reports appeared earlier today stating that the step would be announced by Johnson in a New York speech to an Associated Press luncheon Monday. But at an impromptu news conference, the chief executive called the reports "totally inaccurate."

It was not clear whether the proposal had been totally ruled out by the president or was still under consideration.

Johnson said his speech dould be a "general statement" of foreign policy and would touch on U. S. relations with Cuba, Red China, the Soviet Union and the issues of war and peace.

Lack Of Rain Causes Forest Fire Hazard

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lack of spring rainfall is causing a forest fire hazard so severe in the Sierra that fire camps will be manned two weeks sooner than normal, state Forester Francis H. Raymond says.

Raymond said yesterday that the official fire season could come a month earlier than usual. Fire camps in Central and Northern California probably will be manned May 17 instead of June 1.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Dancing With LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP) — For a short time President Lyndon B. Johnson had the nation's editors—and their wives—dancing to the White House tune.

Johnson invited the 1,000 or so wives and delegates to the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention to the executive mansion for a reception yesterday.

After introducing his family and giving a speech in the flower garden in which he said he wants his administration to kindle "a flaming spirit of adventure," he led the way to the East Ballroom.

He stayed on the dance floor for an hour and 20 minutes, ordering the six-man band to keep up a steady flow of fox trots and waltzes so that he could dance with as many of the wives as possible.

Slaying Suspects

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (UPI) —Police rounded up car theft suspects for questioning today in the slaughter of three of their fellow officers, found yesterday menacled with their own handcuffs and murdered with their own guns.

The bodies of the Gwinnett County officers, all of whom had wives and children, were found handcuffed together in a pine thicket about 20 miles northeast of Atlanta.

Sheriff Quill Sammon, who said the murders were linked to a car theft ring, said "We have a real good lead. The murderers were known to the (slain) policemen."

Beckwith Goes Home

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP) — Byron de la Beckwith, accused slayer of Negro integration leader Medgar Evers, was back in his home town of Greenwood for the first time in 10 months today.

Beckwith, 43, was freed on $10,000 bond yesterday two hours after an all-white jury deadlocked in his second murder trial at Jackson.

Dist. Atty. William Waller, who prosecuted the trial, said it was not definite the state would bring Beckwith to trial a third time.

Barry Predicts Win

WASHINGTON (AP) .... Sen. Barry Goldwater predicted today he will win the Republican presidential nomination on the first or second ballot if he captures California's primary and picks up the delegates he expects from the June state conventions.

Goldwater told the American Society of Newspaper Editors, "It seems that I can count on more than 435 delegates" in the Republican National Convention in July. This is "the most conservative count," he said.

De Gaulle On Mend

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle left his hospital bed today and took a few steps around his room 24 hours after a prostate operation, it was officially announced.

A medical bulletin signed by three doctors at Cochin Hospital said: "General de Gaulle passed a good night, had some food and took several steps in his room. His state of health is very satisfactory."

Writer Ben Hecht Dies At 70

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ben Hecht, whose novels, plays and screen credits enthralled Americans for more than 50 years, died of an apparent heart attack early today at the age of 70.

Ben Hecht

Hecht's death was reported by his wife, Rose, who was unable to rouse him at 8 a.m. in their 14th floor apartment on Manhattan's West Side.

Born of Russian immigrant parents in New York City, Feb. 28, 1894, Hecht's journalistic career began at the age of 10 when he secured a part-time job on the old Chicago Journal.

He moved to the Chicago Daily News 10 years later.

His impressive array of literary achievements included "The Front Page," rollicking, long-run play about Chicago journalism, which later was made into a motion picture.

Hecht's last published book was "Gaily, Gaily," which came out last August.

Aviatrix Flies Solo Around World

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—Petite housewife Jerrie Mock was home safe today from her first in history around-the-world solo flight by a woman, certain to be included among aviation's elite for her feat.

Mrs. Mock

The brunette mother of three landed her single engine Cessna 110, "The Spirit of Columbus," at 9:36 last night to complete a record globe-circling 29-day flight.

She received a triumphal welcome in her hometown and a congratulatory telegram from President Lyndon B. Johnson.

A waiting crowd of 10,000 cheered boisterously when Mrs. Mock's red and white plane touched down and well-wishers pushed through a police line to greet her. Gov. James A. Rhodes was almost knocked off his feet by the enthusiastic crowd.

It was fully five minutes before Mrs. Mock, 38, could open her cockpit door, lift her daughter Valerie, who is almost 4, from her husband's shoulders and hug the smiling little girl. Russell Mock, an advertising man, and sons Roger, 17, and Gary, 16, joined the emotional welcome.

BRUSSELS (UPI)—Belgium's 10,000 doctors ended an 18-day strike early today when the government agreed to halt its medical "draft" and to discuss changes in the controversial state insurance law.

The midnight agreement was expected to end the crisis which had deprived Belgium of all but emergency medical service. Premier Theo Lefevre said he hopes the situation will be "back to normal in 48 hours."

$125,000 Awarded In Death

A Marin Superior Court jury yesterday awarded Mrs. Clara Bradshaw of Novato $125,000 in damages for the wrongful death of her 42-year-old carpenter husband in 1961. The amount is believed to be the highest ever awarded by a Marin County jury in death damages.

Defendants were Marin Municipal Water District and Pacific Mechanical Corp. Mrs. Bradshaw had asked $500,000 damages in the 11-day trial before Judge Richard M. Sims Jr.

The jury ruled in her favor April 9, but reconvened to determine amount due.

A co-plaintiff, Jamie Brewer, 24, of Santa Venetia, also won his personal damage suit against the defendants but then settled out of court for $8,500, according to his attorney, Wayne White, of San Francisco and San Rafael.

Dee H. Bradshaw, husband of Clara, and Thomas Buschfield, 25, San Rafael, died in the 1961 trench cave-in near Tocoloma. Brewer was trapped but survived.

Attorneys for Mrs. Bradshaw were George T. Davis, George Martinez, and Robert Mires. Harold F. Riede and John Moran represented the defendants.

San Rafael attorneys said nearest big damage award in a wrongful death was about seven years ago for almost $98,000.

Computer Class Begins For 30 At College

Mrs. Donald J. Duncan Jr. of 66 Prospect Avenue, Sausalito, asked police yesterday to see if they can determine the owner of a dog with a 'curly tail' who reportedly bit her daughter, Claudia, 6, at West and Main streets Thursday morning. Mrs Duncan said she wants to determine whether or not the dog has had its rabies shot.

Claudia, said Mrs. Duncan, "described the dog as small, brown with a curly tail and stand up ears."

STRATFORD ON AVON, England (AP)—More than $560,000 has been collected for the new center for the study of Shakespeare. The total sought in a world-wide campaign is 1.4 million dollars to keep the place going after it is opened formally next Wednesday by Eugene Black, American chairman of celebrations of the bard's 400th birthday.

15 In Running For Tam Unified Board

Filing for the board of the proposed Tamalpais Unified School District closed at 5 p.m. yesterday with 15 candidates seeking seven positions in the June 2 election.

Mrs. Patricia Latcham of San Anselmo was the last to file as a candidate yesterday.

With the present arrangement, if the unification plan is approved by the voters June 2, one person will be automatically elected to the board, barring some unusual maneuver such as a write-in campaign.

He is Dr. Stanley J. Wolfe, running unopposed in the Sausalito-Bolinas trustee area. Candidates are elected countywide, but must be elected from trustee areas, and Wolfe was the only one to file from that area.

Mrs. Latcham, wife of attorney Franklin C. Latcham, is legislative chairman for the Parent-Teacher Assn. at Wade Thomas School. She lives at 165 Crescent Road, San Anselmo, and has been a Marin resident two years.

She has four children, two of whom are old enough to go to Wade Thomas. She said yesterday she strongly supports the unification proposal and has entered the race partly so she could fight for it.

This is how the race stands:

Area 1 (Lagunitas, Nicasio, Fairfax)—Roy R. Bunt, Nicasio, and Laurence G. Hermann, 220 Marinda Drive, Fairfax.

Area 2 (San Anselmo)—Robert W. Corlett, 14 Carolina Avenue; Doris M. Harnsberger, 30 Green Valley Court; Edmund J. Thomas Jr., 144 Pine Street, and Mrs. Latcham.

Area 3 (Ross, Kentfield) — Ray A. Hubbard, 19 Spring Road, Ross, and Dr. John C. Siemens, 10 Turnagain Road, Kentfield.

Diem's Brother In Court Again

SAIGON (AP) — The late President Ngo Dinh Diem's younger brother Ngo Dinh Can was carried into Saigon's Criminal Court building on a stretcher today as his trial on charges of murder, extortion and misuse of power entered its third day.

Can lay in an anteroom, in a state of apparent semiconscousness, during the four-hour morning session. The trial was then adjourned until Monday.

Can's court appointed doctor said his condition had improved slightly since yesterday, when he suffered whas was described as a heart attack.

McCarthy To Attend Governor's Reception

Marin Sen. John F. McCarthy is among 13 state legislators who will be guests at a governor's reception for 29 visiting Japanese Monday evening at the executive mansion in Sacramento.

The Japanese are members of the National League of Young Liberal Democratic Prefectural Assemblyman, who are anti-Communist liberals. They are making a week's tour of California, then will head east.

Youth Writes Theme: 'I Plan To Kill President'

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Students in a Jefferson High School English class turned in themes on the subject, "What I plan to do in the summer of 1964." One sent the teacher scurrying to the dean of boys, Jose Garcia. He called police.

The 10th line of the disturbing theme read: "I'll take a trip to Washington, D.C., and kil the president."

Yesterday Carl Delvic was held under $5,000 bond by U.S. Commissioner Paul Game Jr., on a charge of threatening the president's life.

"That is what I would like to do," the youngster replied when asked if he still wished to kill President Lyndon B. Johnson.

The theme also outlined plans to purge the nation of Communists, Jews and Negroes. Delvic as asked if it accurately portrayed his plans. He said, "Yes, sir."

The Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., is the largest library in the world.

Two Sausalitans were injured when their cycle struck a rock, veered into a mailbox and overturned on Platt Avenue in Sausalito at 7:10 p.m. yesterday.

Regina McCaffrey, 22, of 595 Bridgeway, Sausalito, the passenger, suffered a possible fracture of the right leg and was admitted to Marin General Hospital where she is reported in satisfactory conditon today.

Michael Pickett, 24, also of 595 Bridgeway, suffered cuts of the hand, left eyebrow and right knee. He was treated at the hospital and sent home.

Sausalito police said the cyclists were westbound near 61 Platt Avenue when the accident occurred. Both were thrown from the motorcycle when it hit the mailbox, police said.

15-Year-Old Boy Still Missing

Police had no new word today on the whereabouts of a missing San Rafael High School student who checked out of school Thursday, saying he was moving to New York.

But the mother of 15-year-old James W. Harper told police yesterday she believed he was eager to visit the World's Fair there, which opens Wednesday.

Mrs. Maida Barrick of 36 Knight Drive, San Rafael, said several of her son's friends had heard him say he hoped to go to the fair. Some also said a man visited the school claiming to be a recruiter for workers at the fair.

Thief Might Have Car Key

A thief who may have had a key pulled a "daylight job" Thursday, taking a purse with contents valued at $1,726 from a Larkspur woman's car at the Meadow Club, Fairfax.

Mrs. Lorraine M. McFarland of 173 Harvard Drive, Larkspur, told sheriff's deputies there was no sign of forced entry into her auto, left all day at the clubs' parking lot.

Among contents of the purse, she said, were a $1,000 watch, a $500 diamond wedding ring, two bracelets and several credit cards.

Revolt Breaks Out In Congo

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (UPI) — A revolt against the Central Congolese government broke out in Kivu Province today. Armed leftist partisans were reported rioting in the provincial capital and threatening to attack a Swedish-Norwegian Protestant Mission.

Armed terrorists were reported encircling the mission at Lemera, north of Uvira close to the Burundi border on Lake Tanganyika, at Leopoldville.

The mission consists of about 20 Swedes, including women and children, and five Norwegians.

Camper Ends Up On An All-Night Hike

A 25-year-old San Francisco man who went camping on Mount Tamalpais last night wound up on an all-night hike to Fairfax.

Raul E. Carter was standing in the 1900 block of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Fairfax at 5:30 a.m. today looking tired and bewildered when he was spotted by Reserve Police Officer Pete Cortilet.

He told Cortilet he and a group of friends parked their cars at the Mount Tamalpais Mountain Theater last night and hiked to a camping location two miles away.

At about 10 p.m. Carter decided to go back to his car for some gear and got lost. He kept walking until he came out on Bolinas Road, about a half mile from the Fairfax City limits, and then on to downtown Fairfax.

Police said he had a sprained ankle, but refused treatment. He was shuttled by police cars back to Mill Valley.

Carter said he didn't know where he had been but he had passed three lakes during the night.

Stassen Going To High Court

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen's attorneys say they'll ask the U. S. Supreme Court to force California to place his name on the Republican presidential primary ballot.

Yesterday, the State Supreme Court upheld the refusal of Secretary of State Frank Jordan to put up Stassen's name for the June 2 contest.

Jordan had ruled that Stassen failed to collect by the April 3 deadline enough signatures of registered voters to qualify his name.

The state's high court also refused, on the same grounds, to order placed on the ballot a Democratic slate of delegates sponsored by Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty and pledged to President Johnson. Yorty said he, too, would appeal the decision to the U. S. tribunal.

A delegation headed by California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, also supporting Johnson, has qualified.

Stassen and Yorty said technicalities barred their qualification. Yorty's petition fell 171 short of the required total. Stassen was short more than 4,000 names.

Hunt For Body Is Abandoned

The search for the body of a 51-year-old San Francisco printer who jumped from the Golden Gate Bridge Tuesday was abandoned that day, the Coast Guard reported today.

The body of Thomas Dillion of 279 Jules Avenue was seen floating in the water for a short time after the leap, but has disappeared since.

The Independent-Journal erroneously reported yesterday that the body was recovered.

Airman's Stolen Auto Is Found

A Hamilton Air Force Base sergeant's stolen automobile was found early today, a short time after its theft had been reported by the Novato Police Department.

Marin County sheriff's deputies found the car, a 1957 Ford belonging to S/Sgt. George R. McBurl of 149 Walton Avenue, Hamilton Air Force Base, on Smith Brothers Ranch Road near the 101 Drive In Theater.

The vehicle was stolen from the base sometime yesterday, the Air Police reported. It was undamaged when found.

Salmon fishermen today are getting their first catches since the season began Wednesday, according to Cass Gidley, owner of Casserino's, wholesale and retail fish house in Sausalito.

Start of the fishing operation first was delayed by price negotiations and later by bad weather.

The catches are being made southeast of the Farallone Islands, Gidley said.

Berry and Richard Higbie, 36, of Newport Beach, Orange County, each with a five-story high, one-man balloon, were to make trial runs for a proposed balloon race.

They were to pass by the Golden Gate Bridge before anding in Contra Costa County.

But Higbie folded up his balloon after today's near tragedy and a shaken Berry said he would never go up again.

"I'm all done," Berry said when it was over. "I can never go up again not knowing people on the ground are safe."

Hallinan Aids Sit-In Pickets

Attorney Vincent Hallinan of Belvedere was the only defense attorney of six representing youthful Sheraton-Palace Hotel sit-in pickets in San Francisco Municipal Court yesterday who saw any progress in his clients' cases.

Hallinan, who represents 10 picketers involved in the March 6 demonstration, declared in his opening statement that the law was "grinding away to destroy" his clients.

The trial for his clients is only one of six similar cases scheduled to be held. The other five have been stalled because of inability to select juries.

Trapped Skunk Is Shot Dead

The skunk trapped in a garbage can at Inverness Lodge Thursday night was shot dead by a Marin County Humane Society worker yesterday.

The animal's body was delivered to the Marin County Health Department where tests may be made next week. County Health Officer Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht said she wants to determine if the skunk ever had contact with another animal or a human. If so, test will be necessary.

The skunk lived in the garbage shed near the lodge for several months.

County Comment

by

BILL FUSSELMAN

SUPERVISOR

DISTRICT 2

ON THE AIR AND IN THE PAPER

THIS "COUNTY COMMENT" is one that I was prepared to publish last November. I had written a somewhat angry reply to the reporter who had covered our meetings and who had supported the Administrator's office in his recommendation against implementing the fixed formula plan for the Retirement System. This reporter and three or four others had been quite bitter, claiming that the resolution passed on September 17th, which did implement the plan, was faulty and was railroaded or steamrollered through. However, I was requested in early November to write one of the guest editorials for Newspaper Week. In accepting the assignment, I told the Managing Editor that I was prepared to take on the reporter and that I would have to postpone that in order to write the requested editorial. Then the assassination of our young President and the following month of mourning brought us into the Christmas season and I felt like, I imagine most of you did; so I put it to one side. In the meantime the reporter quit and went for a world cruise.

THE MOST CHARITABLE THING THAT COULD BE SAID about their carping was that is was just an hysterical fear of the unknown. They certainly didn't come up with anything but a request for further study. There had been plenty of time for them to become informed, as the funds for the County's participation had been voted into the budget more than a month before.

THE CHARGES OF RAILROADING AND STEAMROLLERING were completely false. No one on the Board knew how the vote would come out until the roll was called. The three or four men in the audience who later objected could have raised their hands at any time before the motion was made and would have been granted the floor. I believe, in thinking it over, that there was no intention to indicate their opposition to the retirement plan if it appeared that the vote might go to suit them and be against the plan. I voted against the budget, when it was adopted. It contained an item of $1,221,619 toward the Civic Center Complex of some $15,000,000 total. I believe the people should have a chance to vote on expenditures that large. The County's contribution for the retirement plan of $157,335 was also in the budget as passed with a four to one vote. You see the money was provided for by the four votes. Mr. Gnoss, Mr. Ludy and I simply voted for the implementation of the plan on September 17.

THIS PLAN HAD BEEN CHECKED AND RECHECKED, DISCUSSED, STUDIED AND RESTUDIED by the Retirement Board. I have been a member of the Retirement Board since the first year (1950).

I SUPPORTED THE IDEA OF HAVING A BANKER ON THE RETIREMENT BOARD AS AN ADVISOR AND TO HAVE CHARGE OF THE INVESTMENTS. First to serve was the late beloved Elmer Nielsen of the then American Trust. Then George Dagnall of the Bank of America. When he was transferred to the East Bay, John Bacigalupi of the Bank of America consented to serve. He has developed one of the finest investment portfolios you will find anywhere. We have had such excellent earnings that the actuaries have recommended reductions in the contributions from time to time.

OVER TWO YEARS HAS BEEN SPENT in this research by the Retirement Board. Although I am a member of the Retirement Board by appointment, as an elected official, I am not blanketed into the system automatically and have never joined because of the low salary paid to Supervisors during the previous years and am not entitled to a pension.

THE FIXED FORMULA PLAN IS A GOOD ONE I AM CONVINCED and an improvement both socialogically and because of the total economics involved. Most certainly, after serving my County with dedication for these many years, I am not going to change now. I was chairman of the Health and Welfare Committee for twelve years and have learned firsthand of the difficulties of people living on retirement pay.

I ASKED THE AUDITOR-CONTROLLER to give me a breakdown of the experience, dollar-wise, from July 1, 1950 to March 31, 1964. The following is a summary:

Employee Participation 7/1/50 - 3/31/64 (approximately 52% including accruals)	$ 2,903,776
County Contribution 7/1/50 - 3/31/64 (approximately 48% including accruals)	2,780,941
	$ 5,684,717
Less Pensions Paid and Refunds to those leaving County Service	(1,484,032)
Total Assets—3/31/64	$ 4,200,685

Employee Participation	$ 2,903,776
Pay Outs, as above	1,484,032
Balance in Employees Part of Fund	$ 1,419,744
County Contribution Untouched	2,780,941
	$ 4,200,685

AFTER RECEIVING THE ABOVE DATA FROM THE AUDITOR-CONTROLLER, I THEN ASKED THE TREASURER-TAX COLLECTOR to try and make a projection for the next twenty years to see as near as possible what the dollar situation would be. He made a calculation based on the present employee count. (No new ones contemplated). It was assumed that the dropouts would be replaced by the new. It was also assumed that all General Members will retire at age 65 and all Safety Members will retire at age 60. The generally accepted longevity was also assumed. An average of $400.00 per month was used for female salaries and $500.00 per month for males. The present rate of contribution by employees would remain the same. (Note: It has risen slightly in the past). The County's rate would remain the same for seven years and then decrease by 3.35% which is the exact percentage of decrease over the past 13 years.

HE CAME UP WITH THE FOLLOWING APPROXIMATION FOR THE TWENTY YEARS:

Employee Contribution	$5,897,362
County Contribution	8,222,036
Payments of all claims (for Retirement and Withdrawals) for the next 20 years and Assumed longevity beyond	6,407,211

This would indicate that the contributions by employees would cover all but $509,844 in payouts during the next 20 years. However, this would be more than covered by investment earnings of the employee part of the fund plus the over $1,000,000 employee carryover from the past 13 years.

IT SHOULD BE NOTED, ALSO, that the County part of the fund for the 33 years involved could be assumed to reach between eleven and twelve million dollars untouched, but used as a backlog, which with additional investment earnings future custodians would undoubtedly find of value to the community.

Sincerely,

Bill Fusselman

Do Sample Bodice Before You Make A Different Neckline

By EUNICE FARMER

"I made a two-piece dress with a scooped neckline, and found out too late that the neckline isn't for me. What can I do? I would appreciate your help. I am one of your faithful followers from Canada and eagerly await your weekly hints." Mrs. E. A. W.

Dear Mrs. E. A. W.:

Before you try a neckline that is different than what you are used to, it is best to make a sample bodice out of muslin to check it out. Of course, I realize that this advice is a little late at this point.

First, may I suggest that you ease the neckline in a little by pinning it to a piece of interfacing that is cut slightly shorter than the neckline of your dress. Next, cut a strip of bias about 4 or 5 inches wide, fold it in half and baste the raw edges to the neckline of your dress. Pull the bias slightly as you apply and it will cling closer to the neck. After you have checked to see that it is the correct length you may finish the ends. This bias fold will roll over the neckline slightly and produce a soft effect as well as fill in the neckline for you.

"Please tell us how to make arrowheads for detail interest on our skirts." Mrs. F. L.

Dear Mrs. F. L.:

A handmade arrowhead is a detail that gives a custom finish to the top of pleats, ends of darts, pockets, etc., and can make a garment look twice as expensive as it really is. These can be added to ready-made skirts also. They are most effective when used on plain fabrics and are usually made with silk buttonhole twist in a matching color. These must be made through two layers of fabric. Add a separate piece of matching fabric on the wrong side if necessary.

Carefully mark an even triangle one-half inch to three-fourths inch with chalk, now go over these marks with a small machine stitch. It is important to have your triangle perfectly even since this will be your guide line.

1. Begin step one by bringing your needle up on the left corner (a). 2. Insert your needle from right to left through the upper point (b), picking up only a thread or two of your fabric to form a point. 3. Insert needle in right corner (c). Repeat these steps until triangle is filled, be sure that each stitch is as close as possible to the previous stitch without overlapping or leaving an empty space. Press on wrong side on a heavily-padded surface for a raised look.

"Since it is almost time for Little League baseball to begin for another season, this idea might be Mother's solution for the baseball suit for the bat boy. These can rarely be purchased in the right color and size for the small fry.

"Buy a pattern for pullover pajamas with an applied neckband on the right side. Get your material and braid trim to match big brother's uniform. Simply extend the neckline to the bottom of the jacket and put snaps or buttons on to resemble the regulation uniform. The pants may be cut a little shorter and gathered at the knees with elastic. These were so successful I made a pair for a neighbor on another team."

Mrs. Edward G. Ross, St. Helens, Ore., is this week's winner of a tailor trix pressing board for this suggestion.

"I have made a coat from a proportioned pattern and used the medium size by mistake, I should have used the small size. The pockets are slit into the coat and now I discover they are too low for me. Can anything be done with them at this point? I feel like I'd have to have arms like an ape to reach down into them." Mrs. R. D.

Dear Mrs. R. D.:

The simplest way to change your pockets, would be to make patch pockets and apply them over your slit pockets, bringing them higher. The old pocket won't show and you'll have that much more experience with your sewing, so cheer up, your coat can be saved.

Simple summer and spring dressed are often self-trimmed with bias folds, cordings, etc. You'll want my leaflet "Spaghetti Straps and Rope Belts" for this information. Please send 10 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for it to Sew Simple in care of this newspaper.

About 200 workers are employed to pick the cotton and there is a special guard for the crew and the crop. The ranch is only about 60 miles from the coast but the Morrisons did not go there. Random Thoughts About Problems Of Integration

"I FEEL THAT the publication of Mrs. Hanford's letter is so degrading that I must cancel our subscription at once," a Mill Valley woman wrote the I-J in a letter printed Tuesday in "What Our Readers Say."

Let it be recalled that Mrs. Hanford's letter was an anti-integration, anti-Negro, anti-Rumford Act tirade, printed last week.

WHY PRINT IT? Was it not offensive to many, probably most? Did it not pin the "Red" label on responsible American elected representatives?

Yes, it was offensive, on many counts.

But it represented a point of view held by some among us who do not always proclaim it openly, although they vote it at the polls and whisper it around the neighborhood in ways calculated to have the most effect.

There was no unanimity in the I-J as to whether this rare letter should be published. But it got into the paper nevertheless. And the results were, in the largest sense, pleasing.

MRS. HANFORD'S contentions were denounced from all sides for all kinds of reasons.

As this is written, not one solitary comment has been heard defending the point of view put forth by the Hanford letter.

This is the most pleasing part.

It means that the view put forth in the Hanford letter is not held by so many any more, that they are not strong enough to support it openly.

It means that people who want to bring an end to Negro and other racial and minority oppression are growing in numbers, courage, strength and voice—right here in Marin.

HOW THE REST of California votes on the Rumford Fair Housing repeal remains to be seen, but it looks like Marin will wind up voting against repeal, a vote in favor of extending American freedom and justice to all regardless of race, creed or color.

If the Rumford Fair Housing law is repealed, the extremists among the integrationists—those who conduct illegal demonstrations—can count themselves among the principal contributors to the defeat of the cause they say they hope to advance.

You cannot effectively right a wrong with another wrong. Extremist integrationist groups seem to have overlooked this old verity.

California's Fair Employment Practices law was enacted to combat discrimination in employment. Breaking other laws aimed at keeping order and preserving other rights is the mob approach to enforcing fair employment rights. But it is NOT a reasonable nor, in the long run, an effective approach.

Our American successes have been built on our respect for and reliance upon the law. Mob action tends to work in reverse, as was indicated this week in the findings of the California Poll conducted by Mervin Field, a distinguished resident of Belvedere.

The poll shows that, since the mob uprisings, voter opinion over the state has swung sharply AGAINST the Rumford Act and in the direction of its repeal in the wake of extremist mob demonstrations.

THE REPEAL OF the Rumford Act would be a tragedy.

Impatient integrationists would do well to reflect on their ultimate aims. If they want the assistance of the Rumford Act in accomplishing ultimate complete integration, they had better mend their ways—or be prepared to accept responsibility for bringing about the most serious set-back the cause they say they espouse could possibly suffer in our state.

FIVE OR SIX THOUSAND years ago, wise men whom Jews and Christians alike believe were inspired by God Himself, perceived the necessity at times to accomplish things by indirection.

In the third chapter of Ecclesiastes it is written:

"To every thing there is a season and a time to every purpose . . .

" . . . a time to break down and a time to build up;

"A time to cast away stones and a time to gather stones together . . .

"A time to get and a time to lose . . .

"A time to rend and a time to sew; a time to keep silence and a time to speak;

"A time to love and a time to hate; a time of war and a time of peace."

It seems obvious that the integration extremists are woefully off in their timing, undermining their own cause.

DIFFERENT PEOPLE react in different ways to shocking situations.

The woman from Mill Valley cancelled her subscription to the I-J. If that made her feel better, or helped the world one whit, more power to her.

But we think by all standards the woman with the most constructive approach was the Tiburon mother who wrote, " . . . I rather welcomed it (the Hanford letter). The opportunity was herewith presented to my husband and me to have a lengthy discussion with our children regarding 'hate material,' and the methods used by crafty and bigoted individuals to sway others.

"What a perfect lesson we all had."

Bouquets And Brickbats

A BOUQUET to the Junior League for sponsoring the Volunteer Bureau of Marin, which opened last week at 725 A Street, San Rafael. There seems to be no shortage of volunteer workers to assist various voluntary health and welfare organizations. Nor is there a shortage of work for volunteers to do. The clearing house can perform a valuable service by steering volunteers to jobs and steering jobs to volunteers.

BRICKBATS to completely irresponsible radio stations which Monday afternoon continued to spread unconfirmed rumors that Premier Nikita Khrushchev was dead before American and Soviet news sources had time to check out the rumor.

BOUQUETS to all our public libraries on the occasion of Library Week; but A BRICKBAT at the same time to the San Rafael City Library for closing each evening from 6 to 7 (prime homework hours for some students) while the library staff takes time out to eat. Seems to us that some other system — staggered dinner hours, or some such — could be worked out to provide better service during this critical hour.

A BOUQUET to Fred Dickson on his appointment to the state's Adult Authority. And the same to Lawrence E. Wilson, Dickson's successor as warden of San Quentin. We wish them both all the best.

GOOD TO HAVE A PET AROUND THE HOUSE

Dogs and cats can give a sturdy boost to mental health and good relations in the family, according to one expert.

He also reported: (1) Pets can be especially helpful in providing diversion for disturbed children. (2) Large animals seems to be best for children who have trouble getting along with other persons. (3) Children whose problems are mostly internal appear to prefer small animals. (4) Besides teaching lessons in affection and loyalty, household pets can add variety to family relationships and provide a common focus for conversation.

The tremendous diversity of life in the animal kingdom, from the powerful jungle beast to the most domesticated puppy, testifies to the riches of nature that a bountiful Creator has put at man's disposal for his use and enjoyment.

Treat all God's creatures with consideration. But most of all treat man himself—every man—with the same care and attention you expect for yourself.

"Let everything that has breath praise the Lord!" (Psalm 150:6)

Ugliness On Editorial Page

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I have just finished reading tonight's paper, including especially the "Letters to the Editor" page, concerning Mrs. Hanford's letter, which I missed for some reason. After digging through a stack of papers, I found it. I am ashamed, and wished I hadn't bothered. There are times when I wonder if sections of the Bill of Rights shouldn't be repealed. Thank heaven my seven-year-old daughter is still struggling with phonics on the front page, much less attempting to understand such ugliness and viciousness in the editorial page. It is difficult to raise a family to be decent, good citizens when persons such as Mrs. Hanford live in our county and country. God help her—and us.

Director Pleased By Bridge Advice

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On March 24, you published in its entirety my letter to you under the heading, "Bridge Director Asks For Public's Ideas," in which I also stated my present thinking on the major issues concerning the Golden Gate Bridge.

The many responses have been most articulate, constructive and gratifying and I have personally answered every one of them. A variety of opinions, suggestions and ideas were expressed with respect to a second crossing and a second deck on the Golden Gate Bridge, all of which are being reproduced and catalogued for study by the Bridge Directors and staff.

It is obvious from the letters that the question of immediate concern is that of lane-control devices. Not only did most of the letters to me directly refer to this question, but so did an equal number of letters addressed to the Bridge Board, which I have analyzed concurrently. All of these letters, together with numerous editorials, and resolutions passed by governmental bodies and civic and professional organizations, clearly indicate that a vast majority of the people on both sides of the bay oppose the construction of overhead signal control devices (arches).

It also should be apparent to the public through recent news releases that the Bridge Board is taking cognizance of this public opinion and is now committed by Board resolution to make exhaustive studies of "all known types of traffic control devices potentially suitable for reversing lanes on the Golden Gate Bridge," the inference being that there will be an all-out effort made to obviate arch construction.

Issue Taken On Redwood Letter

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Having read with interest the beautifully compiled book by Francois Leydet, entitled "The Last Redwoods," I read with equal interest his letter in your April 10 issue.

Mr. Leydet's letter made interesting reading, but I would like to raise questions on some of his statements, to wit:

1. Mr. Leydet states that all virgin redwoods in private hands will be gone by the year 1980 at the present rate of logging. This statement is completely without basis in fact. In Humboldt County, where the bulk of private redwood timber is now being harvested, the assessor is estimating a 30-year average life for old growth redwood. At the present rate of cutting many of the larger redwood companies will still have a very substantial stand of virgin redwood on hand 50 years from now and even longer.

2. Mr. Leydet mentions the "moderate extra cost" of the easternmost highway routing that is being proposed in the vicinity of Prairie Creek Redwood State Park. The difficulty here is defining the word "moderate," because the additional cost involved has been stated to be approximately six million dollars. I am also sympathetic with proponents of this easternmost route. But the question is: Who is going to pony up this six million dollars?

3. Mr. Leydet refers to logged-over areas as being "barren and devastated." He again displays ignorance here because logged-over timberlands are no more barren and devasted than is a cornfield after harvesting. Some of the most beautiful scenery along the Redwood Highway is formed by the dark green hillsides now vigorously growing timber on lands that were just as "barren and devastated" a few years.

4. Mr. Leydet is concerned with the ethics and the "breach of trust" involved in cutting redwoods that were in many cases purchased by private donations with the understanding that they would be "preserved for all time." This is a valid and understandable argument, but the unfortunate economic fact is that the same expanding population that enjoys the standard of living enabling the purchase of Mr. Leydet's beautiful book is the factor that forces the construction of new freeways.

Safety Building Coverage praised

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The successful campaign for voter approval of the town's (Corte Madera) bond issue for public safety buildings demonstrated the vital part that a newspaper can play to inform the public. The Independent-Journal provided the means for every citizen to learn the facts on this issue. The accurate and concise articles which your Phil Fradkin wrote, as well as the efforts of other members of your staff, were very effective. Mr. Fradkin proved to be a very good photographer in addition to his clear reporting.

Thank you for the excellent coverage you have given this issue and all our other affairs.

Critics Of Anti-Poverty Program Held Wrong In Picking At Fringes

WASHINGTON—The critics of President Lyndon B. Johnson's anti-poverty program are making a great mistake picking at its fringes.

The argument that this must not be the business of the federal government is a profitless and out-dated argument.

Any democratic society must be concerned at every level of government with the problem of continued high employment in the face of continued high prosperity.

Any democratic society must be concerned at every level of government with the fact that, despite a consistently rising standard of living for many Americans, despite a higher average wage for most Americans, despite a mounting gross national product of more than 600 billion-dollars persons in this country can afford neither adequate food nor adequate shelter nor adequate clothing nor adequate schooling.

I submit that at no level of government dare we neglect this poverty in the midst of affluence.

THEREFORE, the central questions to be asked—and answered— are:

Do the proposed actions go to the heart of the problem, to its causes, not merely to its symptoms?

And even if the measures are well-conceived, can poverty be substantially done away with?

It seems to me that the war-on-poverty program which its chief of staff, Sargent Shriver, has put together for the president and unfolded to Congress reflects realistic, workable, and, indeed, conservative economic principles.

He is not talking about increasing handouts in order to decrease distress.

What are the causes of increased unemployment and continued poverty in the face of increased prosperity? They are, as cited by Raymond J. Saulnier, former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers and no pie-in-the-sky economist: "lack of skills," inadequate education," "unsuitable or inadequate work experience," and "discrimination."

These are the causes and the Shriver program is aimed at them.

These are the things which make people poor and keep them that way.

I THINK this nation cannot accept continued poverty for 9,300,000 families with a median income of $1,800 a year. This is not due to the failure of our economic system. It is due to the failure of our society to provide the education, the job training and re-training, the encouragement and the environment needed to help the poor become productive and the productive become more prosperous.

This is why a panel of practical business leaders helped to shape and then gave its unanimous endorsement to the program which Shriver proposed to the White House.

THE ALLEN-SCOTT REPORT

Congress Drive To Upset Hoffa Verdict

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON—Teamster czar James Hoffa is conducting a drive in Congress to muster pressure behind his demand for a reversal of his Chattanooga jury tampering conviction—with some astonishing results.

This undercover operation is two-pronged:

Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-N. Y.), chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has quietly created a special subcommittee to investigate Justice Department prosecution of Hoffa, particularly in Chattanooga.

Teamster lobbyists are endeavoring to persuade senators and congressmen to denounce the conduct of the trial and the Justice Department's numerous legal actions against Hoffa.

MEMBERS OF Celler's unannounced subcommittee include himself, chairman, and Reps. Jack Brooks (D-Tex.), James Corman (D-Calif.), William McCulloch (R-Ohio) and James Bromwell (R-Iowa).

All are rated friendly to Hoffa.

Also intriguing is Brooks' presence on this backstage committee. The Texan is the closest man to President Lyndon B. Johnson in the House. Brooks is in constant touch with the president, and is credited by congressional insiders as his choice for Democratic floor leader, if a vacancy develops next January.

It is assumed that Brooks' participation in this probe of the Justice Department — which is certain to importantly involve Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy, who has long feuded with Hoffa — means the president is fully informed about it.

CELLER'S unpublicized zeal in going to bat for Hoffa is in striking contrast to his vehement opposition to efforts to investigate charges of commissions and omissions in the enforcement of the immigration laws.

Rep. Michael Feighan (D-Ohio), chairman of a joint immigration committee, proposed a sweeping probe and sought $160,000 to conduct it. Celler led a militant fight against it, and narrowly won by a 69-to-69 tie vote in the House.

SEN. A. WILLIS Robertson (D-Va.), discussing a proposed amendment to the section dealing with contempt in civil rights cases, expressed doubt that Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill.), a critic, had read it.

Douglas claimed he had, saying, "I read it at about five o'clock this morning. I have reread it since."

"I commend my colleague," said Robertson, "not only for his great ability but for his great energy. Any man who gets up at five o'clock in the morning to go to work on this bill excites my admiration."

More Than One Million Quakes Strike During Year

Few Terrors Equal When Earth Starts To Tremble

By RICHARD F. NEWCOMB
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Man knows a lot more about the atmosphere above him than he knows about the ground beneath him. Yet few terrors equal that experienced when the earth begins to quake.

And it does quake — all the time. There are more than a million earthquakes each year, of which perhaps 50,000 can be felt without instruments. Between 10 and 100 quakes each year cause damage, and on the average one does great damage.

Such was the Good Friday quake in Alaska, one of the most powerful earth-shakings on record. Loss of life exceeded 100, and damage, short and long term, may exceed one billion dollars.

At present, it is impossible to predict the exact time and place earthquakes will occur. Scientists, spurred on by studies begun during the International Geophysical Year 1957-58, have several promising clues to prediction. The principal one is changes in magnetism in the earth's crust. At least one scientist believes that reliable predicting of earthquakes will be possible within ten years.

In the meantime, there is only one safe prediction — that earthquakes will continue. There have been quakes since the beginning of recorded time.

It can be predicted that the most severe and frequent quakes will occur within two great zones in the world, shown in the map. One belt runs north and south in the Pacific, with the greatest incidence of quakes along both shores. The other belt lies east and west, beginning in the Mediterranean area and running through India.

But this is no guaranty that quakes will not occur elsewhere. They frequently occur outside these known earthquake belts, for no known reason.

In fact, the cause of earthquakes is not known. The surface manifestations have been studied extensively, and what happens there is well known.

Why it happens is still a mystery. Most earthquakes occur from 10 to 50 miles below the surface of the earth. Some occur at depths of 250 miles or more, yet the deepest hole ever drilled is not much more than five miles.

The main value of predictability would be that people in the area could flee before the quake occurred. There is at present no hope of preventing quakes.

Some earthquakes are preceded by foreshocks, others are not. One thing can be said. Rarely do great quakes occur in the same area within years after a severe quake.

The earliest theories on the cause of earthquakes put them down to angry animals under the surface, or subterranean storms and collapsing caverns.

One of the oldest theories is that the earth is still cooling from the molten state, causing cracking at the surface.

A more modern theory is that mountains become lighter as they erode, rising like a ship being unloaded, while the seas sink as the weight of sediment increases.

This supposedly set up strains that gradually built until something cracks.

There are also theories about drifting continents and radioactive heat deep in the earth making the base of continents liquid.

None of these are of much comfort when the earth, seemingly so solid, starts to tremble. If this happens in heavily populated areas buildings crumble, railroads, bridges and other structures are disrupted, water and gas mains are broken.

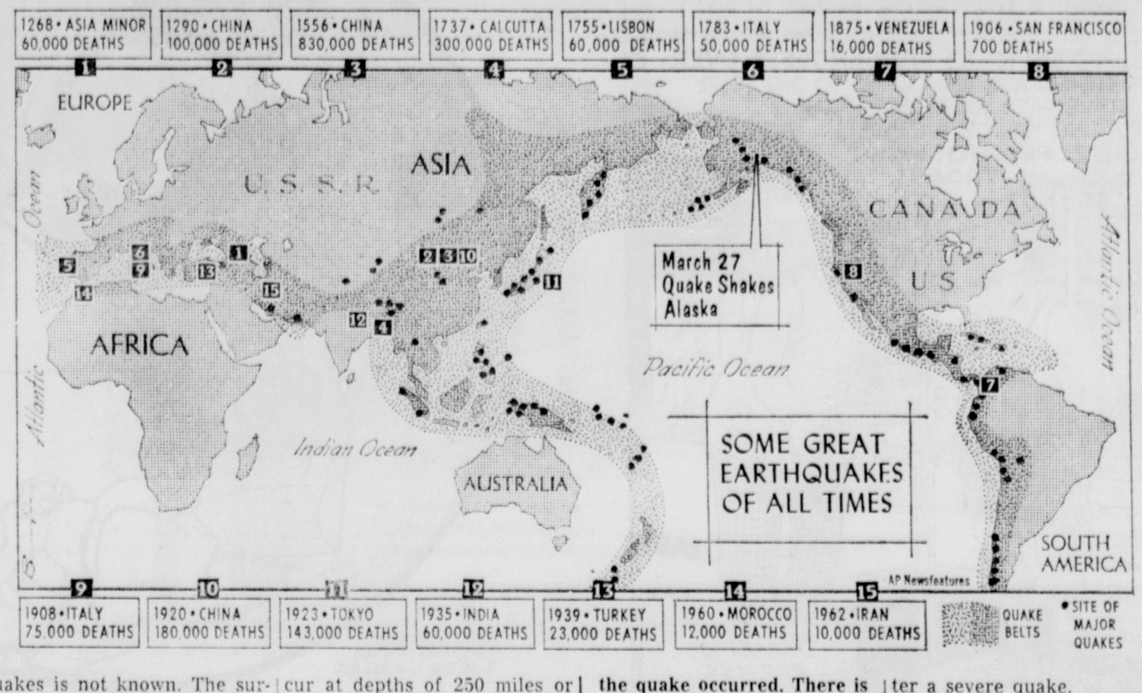
Fires often follow, and many times they do more damage and cause more deaths than the quakes. In the San Francisco quake of 1906, damage from the quake itself was 20 million dollars, from the fires that followed 400 million dollars. In the Tokyo-Yokohama quake of 1923, great fires swept the cities. Forty thousand of the 68,000 deaths in Tokyo were due to fire. When Lisbon was destroyed in the quake of 1755, fires burned for six days after the tremor.

There have been two great quakes in the United States outside of the usual quake belt.

Three great shocks near New Madrid, Mo., in December, 1811, and January and February, 1812, changed the landscape over a large area. Deaths were few, because of the sparse settlement, but a strip of land 40 miles wide and 150 miles long, running south into Tennessee and Arkansas sank from three to nine feet. River water rushed into the "Sunken Country," forests were ruined, and Reelfoot Lake in Tennessee was formed.

In one of the few major quakes on the East Coast, the city of Charleston, S.C., was badly shaken on the night of Aug. 31, 1886. Twenty-seven persons were killed and damage ran to five million dollars. Shocks were felt as far as Bermuda and the Upper Mississippi.

The Alaska quake, focussing the attention of modern science on the mysteries of the earth, may open a new era in the prediction of natural disasters.



TROUBLE IN CUBA

U.S. Sees Dim Castro Future

By JOSEPH M. HOCHSTEIN
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON— Three years after Fidel Castro's armed forces rounded up the survivors of a shattered invasion force at the Bay of Pigs, future control of Cuba remains an open question.

Policy-makers in the United States say Castro has been unable to cement his gains, although to most observers he appears stronger today than ever before.

U.S. officials believe Castro will eventually lose his power—not immediately, not even in the next year or two, but almost certainly within the next five to 10 years.

State Department experts on Cuba are aware their views clash with those of Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D-Ark.). Chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, who said March 25 in a policy speech that the Castro regime "is not likely to be overthrown by any policies we are now pursuing."

Fulbright has proposed that the U.S. resign itself to "the continued existence of the Castro regime as a distasteful nuisance but not an intolerable danger."

The State Department's feeling is that Castro, after more than five years in power, is not yet over the hump and can still be dislodged.

The State Department's belief that the Castro regime faces major hurdles is supported by officials who cite the following:

1. Continued trouble in the Cuban economy.

2. Factional disputes between old-line Cuban Communist and newer Castroites, aired in public as recently as March 26 in lengthy testimony by Castro at a trial of a former revolutionary sentenced to death as an informer in a case dating to 1957.

3. Persistent apathy and lack of popular support for the Castro government.

4. Signs of continuing disallusion with Castro throughout Latin America.

5. Determined belief in Washington that the U.S. cannot afford a successful Castroite regime, if only because prosperity under Communism in Cuba would reflect adversly on U.S. efforts to spur economic development in Latin America through the Alliance for Progress.

Four Soviet battle units that constituted the backbone of the USSR'S ground forces in Cuba have left the island, and the remaining Russian troops are regarded as instructors who are likely to leave when their training missions are completed.

Cuba's economic output, the main target of U.S. anti-Castro efforts, is 15 per cent lower today than it was when Castro came to power on Jan. 1, 1959. Since the Cuban population has grown in that period, U.S. officials say the five-year drop in the economy is closer to 25 per cent on a per person basis.

Since last June, when Cuba was harvesting its smallest sugar crop of the Castro period, the government has taken all farm properties larger than 165 acres away from private production and has decreed conscription for all males between 17 and 45 years of age.

Even with many conscriptees at work in the cane fields, this year's harvest is expected to be almost as low as last year's 3.8 million metric tons.

Lack of machinery and spare parts is regarded as one of the biggest problems confronting the Cuban sugar industry. As in other industries as well, Cuba today depends heavily on an aging, American-built equipment that is gradually breaking down. Cuba is trying to solve this problem with Soviet-supplied equipment and technicians.

Recent purchases such as trucks and buses from Britain and France were made possible by a Soviet decision last year to allow Castro to default on his sugar shipments to the Communist world.

U. S. officials also are watching exile activities closely with particular attention to predictions by Manuel Ray, a former anti-Batista official now directing an anti-Castro movement from Puerto Rico, that a fight to overthrow Castro will be in progress on Cuban soil by May 20. Ray is regarded in Washington as a serious and capable exile leader whose words should not be taken lightly.

Within the U. S. itself, officials continue to prevent exiles from mounting anti-Castro raids from Florida, and resettlement programs have been carried forward to a point that about one-third of the Cuban exiles who settled in the Miami area have now been moved to other parts of the U. S.

Castro's standing in Latin Latin America is believed to have declined further as a result of Venezuela's success in electing a new Democratic government last Dec. 1 amid Cuban-backed terrorism.

Pro-Castro elements in Brazil are also said to have suffered a serious setback.

But U. S. officials say they discern no relaxation of Castro's efforts to export subversion to Latin America.

U. S. officials believe that although the Soviet Union has a considerable investment in Cuba, the prospect of Moscow increasing its aid to Castro is slim.

At the same time, Washington doubts that the Soviet Union would abandon its investment in the near future.

Escape Route From Cuba Is Hazardous

By MATTHEW T. KENNY

MIAMI (UPI) — Only 30 miles of no man's waters separate Cuba from the Cay Sal bank of islands between Florida and Cuba, the "first base toward freedom" for thousands of Cubans who flee their homeland every year.

But the 30 miles can be pitifully long.

The blue-green water is full of sharks, the sun is relentless, hunger and thirst are enemies and Fidel Castro's Soviet-built torpedo boats and helicopters are ever present.

If the escaping refugees can reach the Cay Sal bank area—a 1,000 square mile lopsided rectangle — rescue is virtually assured, thanks to the U. S. Coast Guard. The Coast Guard maintains a constant air and sea vigilance of the "Cuban front."

Twin-engine amphibious planes from the Coast Guard's Dinner Key Air Station in Miami skim low over the islands on daily patrols. Backstopped by cutters at sea, they keep a close vigil over the entire zone north of Cuba. Once a plane spots them, emergency food and equipment is dropped to the refugees and a radio message goes out for a cutter to pick them up.

Since Castro came to power in 1959, the Coast Guard alone has rescued nearly 6,000 refugees in small boats at sea or on one of the Cay Sal bank islands, according to Rear Adm. Irvin J. Stephens, commander of the Coast Guard's Seventh District. The three islands — Elbow Cay, Cay Sal and Anguila Cay — are part of the Bahamas but are under lease to the Hughes Tool Co. of Houston, Texas.

Thousands of other escaping exiles have made the dangerous journey by boat to Florida without Coast Guard assistance. Others have been rescued by Bahamas boats or saved by civilians stationed on Cay Sal Island, the only inhabited island in the cluster.

Almost anything that floats has been used for transportation, from a seven-foot leaky rowboat to a hijacked motor ship. Sometimes these amateur mariners have a dime-store compass or a map ripped from an encyclopedia for guidance. Most of the time they just trust to luck.

A "crew" will include infants in arms, pregnant women racing the stork as well as Castro's patrols, fathers and sons and their families.

The overall estimates of how many Cubans have risked death at sea runs into the tens of thousands. The number of those who failed to make it, because they were lost in storms or gunned down by Castro naval forces, can only be guessed at. Some exile sources suggest that as many as 1,000 may have lost their lives or been recaptured.

Coast Guard figures show the dramatic increase in its Cuban pickups over the past five years. Here they are:

1959—Nine (all in one boat).
1960—157
1961—1,399
1962—1,920
1963—1,756
1964—Nearly 400, so far

Rescues have been made anywhere from a few miles off Miami and Key West, Fla. to short distances from the Cuban coast. But the Cay Sal bank remains a favorite getaway route.

Nikita 'Dead,' Then Has Birthday

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Western diplomatic eyes this week were focused on Moscow, where Premier Nikita Khrushchev was falsely reported to have died—and where he later celebrated his 70th birthday.

The death rumors swept the globe and free world observers were stunned briefly. Without Khrushchev and his "coexistence" brand of communism, what is the alternative?

Khrushchev himself gave an indication in public statements throughout the week. His subject: Militant Red Chinese communism and its leaders.

Khrushchev daily grew stronger in his attacks on the Chinese for attempts to split the Communist community with their aggressive politics.

Revolution, the Soviet leader said, was something for which people must be ready, and he indicated he did not believe the free world yet fell into that category.

He called for equality and unity among all the national Communist parties and he spoke with personal contempt—apparently for the first time publicly—of Red Chinese leader Mao Tze-tung. There was talk of a "showdown" meeting of all national Communist parties.

Mao has been soliciting friends for his aggressive doctrine in Asia, Latin America and Eastern Europe. His taunts at Khrushchev for thinking more of bread than bullets, more of consumer goods than of global conspiracy had lit a spark.

This week the Russian did some soliciting himself, and the 70th birthday celebration made an ideal avenue. Congratulations, praise and well wishes poured into the Kremlin.

In the end even Mao and Red Chinese Premier Chou En-lai wired regards, along with predictions of continued Moscow-Peking unity in the conflict with capitalism.

Around The World Around The Clock

Paris—French President Charles de Gaulle, 73, underwent unannounced surgery for a prostate gland disorder. He was reported in "very satisfactory" condition.

Jackson, Miss.—Byron de la Beckwith was free, for the first time in nearly 10 months, on $10,000 bail after a second mistrial on charges he murdered NAACP leader Medgar W. Evers.

Brussels—Belgian doctors returned to their practices after an 18-day strike.

Chicago—Conservative presidential candidate Sen. Barry Goldwater won the Illinois presidential primary, but fell short of the strength he had been expected to show.

Washington—President Lyndon B. Johnson announced the nation's economy was healthy and more stable than any other in the world.

Washington—Missiles and bombers were argued over by Air Force chief Gen. Curtis LeMay and Defense Secretary Robert McNamara. As usual the Air Force wanted more planes but McNamara broke precedent to release figures showing clear U.S. leads in both missiles and big manned bombers.

Washington—Federal mediators called day and night sessions to reach a settlement in the four-year deadlocked rail dispute. The alternative is a national rail strike April 25.

Houston—Suborbital astronaut Virgil I. Grissom and Lt. Cmdr. John W. Young were named to man the first Gemini rocket flight in preparation for a moon journey.

AFFAIRS OF STATE

Housing Election May Hurt Schools

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS)— Causes for wonderment never seem to cease in the great State of California.

After witnessing the attempts of public officials to sway the public to their own various brands of thinking, a good question might be asked as to why the people spend billions of dollars for education if they are unable to think for themselves after being exposed to the public schools and colleges.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown urged delay of a vote on killing off the Rumford Act so he would have more time to muster a campaign against the initiative to guarantee rights of property owners. He not only urged such a delay, but the legislature accomplished it at the expense of the school building aid program.

Especially during an election year, the attempt to "sway" the public is not all on the side of the Democrats.

Comes now a group of Republicans, headed by Sen. John F. McCarthy (R-Marin) and declares the Grand Old Party is in "mortal danger" of assassination by the "right wingers."

McCarthy is joined by Assemblymen William Bagley of San Rafael, Carl Britschgi, Houston Flournoy, Milton Marks, George Milias and John Veneman in claiming the right-wingers are "running amok."

The senator and assemblymen are going to do something about it, so they say, and make "an all-out effort to bring the truth home."

They don't intend to constitute a "truth squad," they won't indulge in rebuttal, but will go on the offensive to "take findings into every corner of the state."

"We do not want to see the Republican Party in California become a helpless tool of fanatice and veer off its historic highway that runs straight and true through the middle ground of Americanism," their statement said.

All well and good. These Republicans have every right to inform the public as to their opinions, the same as the so-called "fanatics" have every right to voice their own ideas and take over the party if the self-styled leaders let them get away with the action.

It might be interesting to note at least one of the causes for the current dissension among the Republicans. This obviously is lack of leadership. When one element of any group falls down on the job, another moves in and takes over.

Also, the GOP members who play the same tune as was played 10 years ago might stop to consider the fact that times are changing. They might realize that a good many Republicans, as well as Democrats are sick and tired of the "give-away" concept of government, and are just about ready and willing to accept any program that would at least give hope of much needed reforms, economies and solidity.

60 Missiles Converted Into Boosters In Secret Project

By WILLIAM E. HOWARD

WASHINGTON—Sixty strategic missiles that were once aimed at Russia's heartland are being converted into rocket boosters to launch secret U.S. military satellites and space probes.

Some of the converted warbirds — all 1,500-mile-range Thors which were based in England for four years—are destined to develop a new system for shooting down hostile satellites.

The anti-satellite program is being conducted on remote Johnston Island in the Pacific and uses a Thor rocket with two solid-fueled boosters strapped on either side, a so-called thrust-augmented Thor. The extra power allows it to carry a bigger payload higher in the sky.

So far, two of the retread missiles have been fired in the Air Force's Asset Program—a research effort designed to test the reentry characteristics of winged spaceships. These shots were made from Cape Kennedy. The Thors performed in their usually reliable manner.

Air Force officials claim the conversion program is saving about six million dollars. They arrive at the figure this way: A new Thor booster would cost about $450,000 off the production line, while the charge for refurbishing an old one is pegged at $350,000—a saving of $100,000 for each of the 60.

The conversion involves a complete teardown of the 65-foot-long missiles, replacement of worn and corroded parts, and running the engines through some hot tests. The work is being done by the prime contractor, Douglas Aircraft Corp., at its Tulsa, Okla., plant and by the engine manufacturer, the rocket division of North American Aviation Inc.

Thors long have been a workhorse in the U.S. space program and have launched more than 140 Air Force and National Aeronautics and Space Administration payloads—107 of them successfully. In only 16 of the firings was failure attributed to the Thor booster.

Friday Night Is Wonderful —Playing Bridge, Some Songs

CASTRO

Let me tell you what I consider a wonderful Friday night of Bridge. First you attend the Golden Gate Bridge Club at the San Rafael Improvement Club, and you have a bridge date with a guy named Charlie Wagner of San Anselmo.

You walk in and meet Charlie and with a big smile he says, "How the heck are you, Joe? I'm all ready to play some bridge but, you know, Joe, I don't write a bridge column so keep it nice and easy, okay?" And then we start to discuss bridge, but the secret with Charlie is that the discussions are always conducted in a friendly and easy manner. As usually happens, I made a mistake in play, and so I had to apologize to Charlie, saying, "I'm sorry, I should have finessed instead of playing for the drop." Charlie says, "Gee, Joe, don't worry about that. If I had a nickel for every time I did that, I could buy all the drinks tonight after the game." Then Charlie goofs in defense and he says, "I'm sorry, Joe. I saw your deuce lead and I knew you wanted me to return that suit, but I thought I could cash my ace first and then lead it back. Now I see you were counting on me to have this ace as an entry card after we set up your suit. Sometimes I don't see these things until it's too late." And so it goes, friendly, constructive discussions on bridge. But the best part is after the game, and I'll tell you about that right after this hand that Charles bid superbly last Thursday night in Terra Linda.

Perfect bidding, especially the cue bid by Charlie of three spades; after Charlie finds out about Dee's ace and two kings he can count 12 tricks in no trump and with the pre-empt by west he was worried about east being void in spades due to Dee's willingness to bid no trump, which she wouldn't do if she had a void in spades.

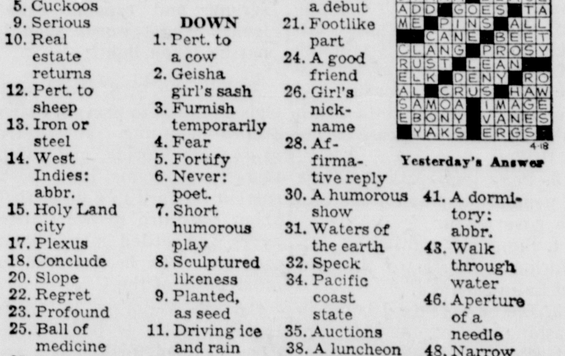
Neither Charlie nor I can sleep after a session of bridge, so we go to any local pub that has a stray piano. Charlie has two hobbies — one is bridge and the other is playing the piano. He plays the piano in an old-fashioned honky-tonk manner. He is self-taught and knows about a hundred pieces by heart. He asks me how I can remember every card during the evening, and then he sits down and plays several dozen tunes!

He plays songs to go with the errors or the good plays that were made. This song is dedicated to when you should have finessed — "Rhythm in Blues." This is for my cashing my ace too soon — "It's Too Late Now." And this is to the poor team we set 700 doubled when we couldn't even make a game — "The Three Little Fishes." This is to the team that fixed us by bidding seven when the rest of the room was in only six, making seven — "All Or Nothing At All."

After Charlie has played a few tunes the customers in the local pub come over to Charlie and ask, "How about buying a round if you play such and such?" Charlie says, "Sure, but my bridge buddy has to be in on it also."

And THAT is what I believe to be a wonderful Friday night of bridge!

SIR BAGBY



ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, April 18, the 109th day of 1964 with 257 to follow.

The moon is approaching its first quarter. The morning star is Saturn. The evening star is Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1775, American patriot Paul Revere began his famed ride to alert the Massachusetts countryside with his cry "The British are coming."

In 1906, the San Francisco earthquake and fire started. When it ended three days later 500 persons had been killed.

In 1942, Lt. Col. James Doolittle and a squadron of 16 B-25's bombed Japan.

In 1945, the U.S. war correspondent Ernie Pyle was killed on an island in the Pacific.

A thought for the day — Playwright Oscar Wilde said: "Experience is the name everyone gives to their mistakes."

Expert Says Trees Are In No Danger

EUREKA (AP)—Redwood trees are being grown almost as fast as they are being cut and "no danger whatever" exists that they will ever become extinct, a consulting forester reported last night.

John Miles, who compiled a technical study for the U. S. Forest Service, said data indicates that by 1985 the total annual redwood growth will equal the annual amount cut in lumber operations.

In a speech before the Eureka chapter of the American Society of Foresters, Miles said redwood is growing on about two million acres, roughly 3,000 square miles.

About 8 per cent is prime virgin old growth, 28 per cent is partly cut and classified as old growth while the remaining redwood stand is young timber.

Miles said the timber economy of the redwood region of Northern California is at a critical point, largely because the white woods, principally Douglas fir, are being depleted rapidly. He said that during the last decade 640 million board feet has been grown while more than two billion has been logged.

He reported the transition period between "boom and bust" and careful tree farming could be economically critical for the next 10 to 20 years.

Miles said ownership of redwood forests is largely private with a trend to large-scale ownership. Privately owned redwood forests total 1,790,000 acres while state and federal holdings are about 195,000 acres.

Miles predicted that during the next 60 years about 20 per cent of present redwood lands will become residential or other non-forest areas with trees retained for landscaping reasons.

He concluded that the redwood region has "complex forestry problems, with its economy in precarious balance—yet rich in promise if we can apply reason to our problems and enthusiasm to our opportunities."

Two Redwood Students Go Hunting For Boar

By PHIL de FREMERY
Redwood High School

While most Redwood High School students spend their leisure time surfing or skiing, junior Mike Patrick and senior Rick Foster hunt boars.

Their most recent expedition took place on the ranch of Mike's grandparents at Annapolis, Sonoma County.

According to Patrick, the two tracked the boars by their hoofprints.

"After locating the tracks, we sat behind bushes and waited for the pigs to cross our path; eventually they did. We took pot shots and hoped for the best," Patrick related.

The boys termed their shooting "quite successful." In five days of hunting, they bagged three boars and two sows.

The pigs were cleaned, dressed, and put in a refrigerated room. Later the youths will have the pigs processed into bacon, hams, sausage and other meat products.

It was an exciting week and, at times, almost hair-raising. On several occasions, the boys were actually treed by the maddened brutes.

"Believe me," Patrick emphasized, "it's an experience I'll never forget."

Homesick Man Seeking Prussians

John Hans Neubauer is looking for East Prussians in Mill Valley.

Neubauer, visiting for six weeks with his daughter, Mrs. David Talbott, and her husband at 100 La Verne Avenue, said today, "I was born and raised in East Prussia. I am homesick."

Konwing there are many other persons from Germany who live in the Mill Valley area, he hopes he will find someone from his old neighborhood. He is from the old City of Koenigsberg (now Kaliningrad) on the Baltic Sea.

Neubauer said all the Germans left East Prussia, formerly in Germany, when Russians moved in at the close of World War II and they are not permitted to return.

A grain broker there, Neubauer is now an accountant in Frankfurt, West Germany. He says he cannot stand the climate in Frankfurt. "It is a wet climate and Koenigsberg has a sea climate, a very healthy climate."

TV Awards Go To Shows, Performers

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actress Inger Stevens and Actor David Janssen today held awards as television's best performers in the fifth annual TV Guide Magazine poll.

Janssen, star of ABC-TV's "The Fugitive," and Miss Stevens, from that network's "Farmer's Daughter," were presented with their awards last night on Bob Hope's NBC-TV show.

Janssen's show also was chosen as the favorite new series in the poll.

NBC's "Dr. Kildare," was chosen as favorite series and its "Tyger, Tyger" episode was selected as the best single dramatic, musical or variety program. Kildare's co-stars, Richard Chamberlain and Raymond Massey, accepted the favorite series award.

Yvette Mimieux, a guest star in the winning segment, joined them to accept the second award.

The best news or information series honor went to NBC-TV's Huntley-Brinkley show for the fifth year. ABC's coverage of the Winter Olympics was chosen as the best single news or information program.

ABC won four awards and NBC three.

The magazine's publisher, James Quick, presented all three networks with special awards for their coverage of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Warren Outlines Chile Aid Program

Careful and complete preparations for initiation of the new California-Chile self-help program, a project which will be phased out as the need diminishes, were outlined last night by Earl Warren Jr., deputy director of the program, at the annual meeting of the Marin Chapter of the American Assn. for the United Nations.

He explained the two phases of the project, the "official" phase which involves financial assistance from the United States government and the Chilean government and the "unofficial" phase which is an extension of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower's People-to-People program.

"The official phase cannot succeed without the other," Warren said. "The second program has already been very successful through exchanges between a high school in Pleasant Hill and one in Chile, but we are hoping to have similar contact set up between chambers of commerce, labor unions and service clubs in both areas."

Another phase of the People-to-People project, the Sister City program set up between Sausalito and Vina del Mar in Chile has been outstandingly successful, Warren said.

"Everywhere you go in Chile, people talk about Sausalito. The town is as well known there as is San Francisco and is certainly better known than Los Angeles," he said.

California is lending its experts in agriculture, education, transportation and water resources to help the South American country help itself, the director said.

"The Chileans preferred self-help to receiving charity or money with strings attached," Warren declared.

The program will be conducted with a small staff with a director and two secretaries in the Sacramento office and a director and administrative assistant and two secretaries in the Santiago office which will open next month.

There will be no duplication of any of the current foreign aid activities being carried on with Chile but the program is designed to utilize the work which has already been done, coordinating with private programs such as the Meals for Millions project and the Freedom from Hunger program.

The California-Chile project was initiated more than one year ago after former President John F. Kennedy urged that new blood be pumped into the Alliance for Progress by bringing South American governments into closer working relationships with the U.S.

Also speaking to the U.N. Assn. at the San Francisco Theological Seminary, San Anselmo, were Mrs. Loren Jay who told of the success of the Sister City program between Sausalito and Vina del Mar and Mrs. Grace McDonald of San Jose, editor of the California Farm Reporter, who explained the attempts of the California Freedom from Hunger Foundations' project to help the people in isolated parts of southern Chile to better help themselves.

Willie, Duke Team Up On Big Play In Giant Victory

Duke Snider appeared as a San Francisco Giant for the first time last night, took quick action on advice hollered by former rival Willie Mays and contributed a key play as his new club edged St. Louis 5-4 in 10 innings.

Scant minutes after Snider's defensive gem, the winning run walked across the plate as Cardinal reliever Ron Taylor threw four straight balls to Chuck Hiller with the bases jammed, the last one bringing a beef from the Cardinals.

Catcher Tim McCarver claimed it was a strike, Hiller said it was outside, but the issue already had been settled by umpire Mel Steiner.

The Cardinals also argued over Snider's play, a twin-killing on a great running catch and throw in the top of the 10th.

Pitcher Bobby Shantz drew a walk from Bob Shaw to start the inning. Then Shaw slipped a slider past Julian Javier for a third strike. Dick Groat hit a line drive to left field ticketed for a hit, but Snider reached it on the dead run and whipped a throw to first just in time to double Shantz, who figured Groat had a sure hit.

"Willie hollered 'First base, first base' to me just as I caught the ball," the Duke disclosed. "That really helped and you have to give him credit. If he hadn't hollered, I might have taken another step or two."

In the sixth inning, Mays unloaded his fourth home run of the young campaign, a three-run shot off Roger Craig, who had held the Giants hitless through five innings.

In years gone by, Snider and Mays were rival center fielders not too far apart — Duke for the Dodgers in Brooklyn and Mays for the Giants in New York. The two became teammates the first day of this season when San Francisco bought Snider from the New York Mets and last night was his first appearance in Giant livery.

"It felt good out there, real good," Snider declared. He drew a walk his first time at bat and didn't get a hit with three official appearances at the plate, but his catch made up for that deficiency.

St. Louis Manager Johnny Keane thought Shantz was safe and said so, but to no avail.

After the Giants were outhit 12-4, Manager Alvin Dark called his San Francisco club for extra batting practice today before resumption of the series against the Cardinals.

After the Giants went ahead 4-3 on Mays' homer, the Cardinals came back to tie the count on an error by second baseman Hiller and singles by Ken Boyer and Carl Warwick.

In the 10th, Shantz walked pinchhitter Jim Davenport, who led off. Rookie Jim Hart followed with a single and then Jose Pagan bunted a sacrifice, moving the runners to second and third Del Crandall batted for Shaw and was intentionally passed.

Taylor, the right-hander, relieved the southpaw Shantz and struck out Jesus Alou. But Taylor couldn't find the plate in four straight pitches to Hiller. Shantz was charged with the loss and Shaw, the reliever acquired from Milwaukee, won credit for the victory.

Billy O'Dell had started for the Giants and given up three runs in the second inning. Billy Pierce relieved and was lifted for pinch-batter Cap Peterson, who singled in the sixth for the first hit off Craig.

How Not To Make A Frog Jump; Hey, John Brodie Has Fan Club

Sabella's of Marin will conduct its annual frog jumping contest tomorrow, bringing to mind last year's event in which a minor tragedy occurred.

Best way to make a frog jump, mind you, is to startle it and the best way to startle it is to make a loud noise. Approved method is for the contestant to jump hard as near to the frog as possible without adding to the population of frog heaven. The sound of shoes thumping on the floor will send Mr. Frog leaping merrily on his way.

Well, here's this one exhuberant little girl, trying desperately to startle her frog. She jumps once. Bang! She jumps twice. Bang! She jumps a third time. S-P-L-A-A-T!

The experience reduced the poor dear to tears. Not to mention the frog. I don't know if he croaked or not, but if he didn't he made a helluva comeback.

JAMES S. TODT, self-appointed president of the John Brodie Fan Club admits he's never met the 49er quarterback. "I just think," says Todt from his throne (third stool from the end at George's Recreation Parlor) "that John is the greatest quarterback and I'll tell the world about it."

Brodie is slightly amused and a bit flattered at the publicity he's received from Todt's efforts. He told a friend at the hockey game the other night, "I've never heard of Todt before, but I can't help liking the guy."

James S. keeps urging his pals to jump on the Brodie Bandwagon. He doesn't tell 'em it's an Edsel.

A real winner, that boy.

JIM CARROLL, the big lineman for Redwood High, has been granted a "full-ride" football scholarship to University of Pacific.

NAVE LANES had a busload of fans at Candlestick Tuesday and for some it was quite a long day. One guy who finally got home at 4 a.m. the next day explained to the wife: "Extra innings, honey. Longest game in National League history."

SAN RAFAEL'S John Seamas, the pride of Foremost Dairies (he's the cream of their sales crop), arrived home from a vacation in Australia just in time for the Giant opener. Probably the only one of the 42,000-plus fans who travelled 6,000 miles to see the game, although he just happened to be coming home anyway.

ED BECKLEY, the sophomore pitching start for first place Terra Linda High's baseball team, is a chip off the old block. Ed's pop, George, was quite a prep (Tam) and semi-pro hurler in his day around Marin sandlots. "The kid's doing pretty good," says proud pop. "The only trouble is he isn't a lefthander." George was a port-sider.

ROGER SIEMENS of Kent Woodlands is making quite a name for himself in the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference. A student at Amherst College, Mass. Roger placed third in a field of some 80 competitors on combined individual performances at the recent conference championships. Amherst as a team placed second.

BOB SELNA, manager of the Mill Valley Merchants semi-pro ball club, believes his 1964 club will be ". . . the best Mill Valley team in the past 10 years." Only apparent weakness is pitching depth, since the veteran Fred Thurman has moved to Sacramento, leaving quite a gap in the staff. "If we can come up with one more good chucker we'll be tough," says Selna, who will conduct more tryouts and continue his search for a flinger tomorrow at Project 17 Park at 1 p.m. The Merchants will open their season May 13.

TERRA LINDA and Redwood high schools have engaged in a brilliant baseball rivalry during the past two seasons—and yesterday's 2-1 T.L. victory wasn't any closer than the previous three times the rivals met.

Last year they played three games, Redwood winning 3-2 and 1-0 and Terra Linda taking the third game 2-1 in 12 innings.

How's that for well-matched teams?

Pistol Tourney Set Tomorrow

There's going to be some fancy shooting in San Rafael tomorrow morning.

Starting at 9:30 a.m., the Tamalpais Revolver Club, with the authorization of the National Rifle Assn., will hold its monthly pistol shooting tournament at the San Rafael Police Pistol Range.

During the match, NRA match rules and classifications will apply. A handicap system is to be used, and beginners will thus be able to compete fairly with experts.

Seals Triumph, Champagne Flows

REDWOOD GIANTS BITE THE DUST

S.F. Gets Second Straight Pennant

The San Francisco Seals are champions of the Western Hockey League for an unprecedented second straight year after a 4-3 victory last night over the Los Angeles Blades.

But Bob Perreault, the bald and stumpy goalie whose 27 saves preserved the Seals' victory, leaves like the seasoned trouper he is—with the fans screaming for more.

"I'm not coming back to San Francisco next year," the 33-year-old veteran flatly declared in the dressing room.

All around him teammates were quaffing champagne from the Lester Patrick Cup, symbol of the WHL title the Seals had captured in the final best-of-seven series by beating the Blades four games to two.

It was the first time in the 16-year history of the league the cup had gone to the same team two years in a row.

Early in the game, Perreault made a skillful save on a shot by Leo Labine from eight feet out with the Seals one man short. Labine went on to score twice with Willie O'Ree getting the other Los Angeles goal.

After the narrow miss, the Seals built up a 3-0 lead before Labine's first goal at 13:49 of the second period.

Ray Cyr scored the first and last goals for San Francisco. Al Nicholson and Gerry Brisson got the other two.

11,229 CROWD

The relentless attack by both squads and the grasping saves by Perreault and Los Angeles goalie Jack Norris kept the crowd of 11,229 standing most of the contest. A turnout of 11,787 for the second playoff game in Los Angeles was the only attendance mark to exceed last night's Cow Palace count.

"It costs too much to keep a wife and kin out here for the season," said Perreault afterward in explaining his decision to stay closer to his home in Quebec.

"However, you can't quit after you win a cup," he continued. "I want to play in the east. I would like to have one more great season."

It looked so unlike a great season for the Seals earlier in the season that Coach Bud Poile who led the Seals to the championship last year, was shifted to general manager in midseason. Nick Mickoski was named player-coach.

FINISHED FOURTH

After almost slipping to sixth, the Seals battled to a fourth-place finish in the regular season standings. They knocked off second-place Portland in the semi-finals while the Blades took care of first-place Denver.

Brunt of much of the criticism during the season was Perrault and especially after games with Los Angeles. The Blades took 11 victories in the regular season series between the two clubs. San Francisco won four times and there was one tie.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Dodgers Beaten

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Joey Jay won. Roger Craig didn't.

Jay and Craig, two of baseball's biggest losers last season with 40 losses attributed to their strong right arms, made their first starts of the National League season last night and neither came away a loser.

Jay, 7-18 with Cincinnati last season, was tagged for two homers but allowed only six hits in all as the Reds handed the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers their third consecutive loss, 7-3. It was Jay's first complete game since last Aug. 16.

Craig, who lost 18 straight and wound up with a 5-22 record for the New York Mets last year, pitched five innings of no-hit ball for St. Louis, but wasn't involved in the decision by the time the Cardinals were finished losing to San Francisco 5-4 in 10 innings.

Craig was in a weirdie.

Through five innings, he was untouchable, and when he left after seven innings he had allowed only three hits. Yet, he was trailing 4-3.

Jose Pagan started the sixth for the Giants with a walk, then pinch hitter Cap Peterson collected the first hit off Craig, a single to right. Matty Alou sacrificed the runners along before Chuck Hiller lined a single that brought in the first run.

BIG MISTAKE

Then Craig made a big mistake, and Willie Mays hit a big homer, his fourth of the season 400 feet over the right center field fence.

Everything was being hit over the fence at Chicago, where Philadelphia outlasted the Cubs 10-8 in an eight-homer battle. Elsewhere, Frank Bolling's two homers led Milwaukee to a 5-2 victory over Houston and Willie Stargell rapped four hits as Pittsburgh spoiled the New York Mets' home opener in new Shea Stadium, 4-3.

In the American League, Baltimore kept the New York Yankees winless 4-3 in 11 innings, Boston whipped the Chicago White Sox 4-1, Washington edged Minnesota 4-3, the Los Angeles Angles belted Detroit 8-3 and Cleveland defeated Kansas City 6-4.

Jay got just about all the support he needed from first baseman Deron Johnson, who homered, doubled, singled, scored three runs and drove in two. Vada Pinson also homered for the Reds while Leo Cardenas stroked three hits and batted in two runs. Ron Fairly and Tommy Davis homered for the Dodgers. The loser was Pete Richert.

The Phillies pulled ahead to stay in the fifth when starting pitcher Art Mahaffey hit a three-run homer and Richie Allen and Roy Sievers connected for consecutive shots, all off Dick Ellsworth. The Cubs fired a five-homer salvo, Billy Williams hitting a pair and Ron Santo, Lou Brock and Billy Cowan one each. Johnny Klippstein won it in relief.

USC Upsets Santa Clara

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Southern California tightened the California Intercollegiate Baseball Assn. pennant race yesterday with a 7-3 victory over league-leading Santa Clara.

It was Troy's second straight win over the Broncos, now 9-2. USC is 6-2. The Trojans knocked Pete Magrini out of the box in the three-run eighth inning, dealing him his first defeat after eight victories.

Gary Coscarag slammed a three-run homer for USC in the third and Bud Hollowell duplicated it in the eighth.

California edged Santa Barbara 3-2 in another league game thanks to Al Diamond's tie-breaking home run in the eighth.

Stanford turned back Cal Poly of Pomona 7-6 in a non-league opener.

Terra Linda, San Rafael, Drake Baseballers Triumph

Brody's Homre Gives Trojans A 2-1 Victory

Bill Brody of Terra Linda High School powered his teammates to a 2-1 Marin Athletic League baseball triumph over Redwood High yesterday with a two-run homer in the fourth inning.

The contest was, despite Brody's smash, a tight pitchers' battle. Each team managed only three hits, and one of those was fatal. Ed Beckley was the winning hurler, allowing just two walks while striking out four in the four innings he worked. Bill Lee came on to finish the game for the Trojans, and the star of Tuesday's Terra Linda shut-out win over Drake proved no easier on Giant batting averages.

Scott Davi, ace pitcher for Redwood, also threw a magnificent game, but made one big mistake in the seven innings. After John Clifford, Trojan centerfielder, singled in the fourth, Davi got Bill De Grazia on a ground-out to third, but this brought big Brody to the plate. The third-sacker blasted the game wide open with his round-tripper, and provided the winners with just enough to ride to victory.

Bulldogs Top Novato Nine In Tight Battle

Mark Maas, gritty pinch-hitter for the San Rafael High baseball team, came through with a run-scoring single in the fourth inning to give his team a 2-1 Marin Athletic League victory over Novato High School yesterday.

John Paterson, winning bulldog hurler, went all the way to get the close win. While he struck out only two, he got those whiffs in crucial spots to save his team's decision. Novato used three pitchers in their losing cause, but it was hitting problems which cost the Hornets the game.

San Rafael got its two tallies after centerfielder Ken Erdman led off the fourth with a single. He stole second, and second-sacker Wade Roberts walked. Then Joe Cunningham lashed another single, scoring Erdman. Maas came up to bat and snapped a cool single to the outfield, scoring Roberts with the game-winning run.

Novato got a lone run in the first inning after Jerry Howarth, Hornet third baseman, was hit by a Paterson pitch. He moved to second on a fielder's choice, and scored on the short-stop's error.

Pirates Blank Tamalpais In League Action

Charles and Al Simontacchi, room-mates at home and battery-mates on the diamond, teamed up for Drake High School to hand Tamalpais High a 6-0 pasting in a Marin Athletic League baseball game yesterday.

Classy Charles scattered six hits and struck out nine enroute to the shutout win, and brother Al knocked in one run, all that was needed for the Pirate victory.

While the Indians were piling up the goose-eggs on the scoreboard, the Drake nine was busy making Tam hurlers Alex Robertson and Dick Daniels uncomfortable. Pirate bats raked Robertson for all their runs, three of which came across on left fielder Lon Gallagher's three run triple in the third frame. Another triple, by third-sacker Don Humphrey, knocked in another tally in the first inning.

Marin Catholic Baseballers Lose

In a practice baseball game, Marin Catholic High School lost a slugfest to Analy High of Sebastopol yesterday, 11-7.

Out-hit also, 11-7, the Wildcats made costly errors and couldn't seem to get the tight pitching which has so far characterized their team this season.

Marin Gets Nat'l Net Matches

The first national tennis tournament ever to be played in Marin County is scheduled to be held May 7 through 10 at the Mill Valley Tennis Club.

It will be the sixth annual National Men's 35 Hardcourt Championships, a tourney for men 35 and older. The classification used to be known as junior veterans.

The tournament, sanctioned by the U. S. Lawn Tennis Assn. will be under the chairmanship of Howard Morehouse of San Rafael. Morehouse promises "the strongest entry list ever." Entry deadline for the championship is May 4.

Morehouse said he hoped to get entrants from all over the country, and also Canada. Bill Hoogs Sr., president of the Northern California Tennis Assn., will be the official referee for the tourney. Honorary referee will be James B. Moffet of San Francisco known as "Mr. Tennis" of Northern California.

Among the activities of Moffet, he is vice president of the USLTA, president emeritus of the Northern California Tennis Assn., and is founder of the Northern California Youth Tennis Foundation.

CERTAIN ENTRANT

Morehouse said he has sent entry blanks to every sectional area of the United States. He said a "certain" entrant will be Emery Neale, runner-up last year in the tournament to Hugh Steward of Los Angeles. Neale is from Portland, Ore.

Another "sure" entrant is Joe Woolfson of Hayward, a former champ in the men's 35 hardcourt.

The championship tournament has been held four out of its five years at the Arden Hills Club in Carmichael, near Sacramento. The only time it was played away from Arden Hills was when it was held in Seattle in conjunction with the World's Fair.

The national net show will be free to the public, Morehouse stated. According to plans of the tourney, quarter-finals will be held the first two days, with semi-final matches played on May 9 and finals on May 10.

Bill Kennedy, pro at the Mill Valley Tennis Club, is the tournament director. Competition will include both singles and doubles matches.

CHRIST LAUGHED

Scholar Points To Wit Of Jesus

By LOUIS CASSELS
U. P. International

People often misunderstand the sayings of Christ because they take seriously what he meant as a joke.

So says the great Quaker scholar, Dr. Elton Trueblood, in a provocative new book entitled "The Humor of Christ" (Harper & Row.)

Somehow, says Dr. Trueblood, we have developed a stereotyped picture of a "Christ who never laughed." But the Biblical evidence shows clearly that Christ was a very witty person, who loved to evoke a chuckle from his listeners with remarks which they would recognize as being preposterous.

"We do not know with certainty how much humor there is in Christ's teaching, but we can be sure that there is far more than is normally recognized," Dr. Trueblood declares.

"There are numerous passages in his recorded teaching which are practically incomprehensible when regarded as sober prose, but which are luminous once we becomel iberated from the gratuitous assumption that Christ never joked."

Dr. Trueblood does not mean that the Gospels are full of funny stories. Christ was no modern comedian striving for a big yak from the audience. He used humor deftly and incisively to illuminate a truth, to deflate a pretense, or to make a contrast vividly clear.

A classic example of Christ's humor, cited by Dr. Trueblood, is the famous saying that "it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God."

Tomes of learned commentary have been written trying to "explain what Christ meant by this startling statement. A favorite explanation of Bible scholars is that he was referring to a gate in Jerusalem, known as "the needle's eye," which was so low that a camel could wiggle through it only after shedding his load.

"Christ MEANT his words to sound preposterous," he says. "We spoil the figure and lose all the robustness, when we tone it down. Christ had a revolutionary message to give and he knew that he could not make himself understood by speaking mildly."

The camel is an inherently ridiculous creature, and it is not surprising that we find the ungainly beast featured in another of Christ's sayings, in which he pokes fun at the legalistic, hair-splitting pharisees for "straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel." The humorous intent of this metaphor is too plain to be missed even by the authors of Bible commentaries.

Dr. Trueblood also makes a convincing case for the proposition that Christ was really joking in several of the "hard sayings" which have caused great bafflement to straight-faced scholars because they sound so unlike him.

This, he believes, is by all odds the simplest and most reasonable explanation of the so-called parable of the unjust steward, in which Christ seems to be commending the conduct of a thoroughgoing scoundrel.

It is also, Dr. Trueblood contends, the logical explanation for the seemingly harsh words about "throwing the children's meat to dogs," which Christ addressed to a gentile woman who sought his help. That the woman herself took his remark as friendly banter is clear from her quick-witted reply that "even the dogs under the table eat the children's crumbs."

Christ was delighted with her reply and immediately granted her request for help. The standard commentaries speak as if he were impressed with her gerat faith. But the plain words of the Gospel text indicate that he was simply pleased with her wit.

FROM AFRICA — Rev. Don Corbin and his wife, missionaries to Senegal, French West Africa, will speak at the Assembly of God Church in San Rafael at 7 p.m. tomorrow.

Tear Down Churches, Says Bishop

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

LEEDS, England (AP) — Dr. Donald Coggan, archbishop of York, wants the Church of England to tear down some of its church buildings and use the money for missionary and welfare work at home and abroad.

Dr. Coggan said this could be done in many places, especially in some of the country villages where the churches are half empty because the bulk of the congregation has moved to the cities.

"It is folly," Dr. Coggan told a church congress here, "to spend money heating and maintaining up to five churches in village communitities, half of which had moved away into the cities.

"The money should be spent on the evangelizing of England, or, more important, on the people overseas who are crying out for the Gospel.

"I have noted that some villages have a parish priest and two or three churches, and a congregation only large enough to fill one of them. This represents a shameful waste of manpower and buildings.

"They should join together, pull down the buildings and move to the suburbs, sending the money saved to Africa, India and the Philippines."

Dr. Coggan also urged his Church to do more for the welfare of foreign students who come here to study at universities.

"Many of them come from Christian backgrounds and it is up to us to see that they do not go back disillusioned and paganized by what they see in our cities and universities," he said.

"We should also guard these students and our own children from evil. Men and women of good will should protest to local bookshops against the sale of salacious literature. If the protests are ignored, these people should ban the shops."

Sir Alec: Conservatives Tougher Than Laborite

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — Prime minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home says his Conservatives are made of sterner stuff than the opposition Laborites and are more equal to the job of persuading the Communists to keep the peace.

At a party meeting last night, Douglas-Home accused the Labor Party of wavering before the Soviet nuclear challenge. The Conservatives, he said, had stood firm against the Soviet pressure.

You Might Not Know It, But It's Marin

So where has the wandering photographer flown today?

No, it is still Marin County. The shoreline is part of the rugged coast just north of Point Bonita. The lagoon, almost landlocked by the sand bar, is called Rodeo Lagoon, and those buildings are headquarters for Fort Cronkhite.

Part of Fort Barry is to the right, on the south side of the lagoon. The rolling hills beyond, still part of the military reservations, might well become park land. The federal government has declared the property excess and both the state and Marin County have voiced interest in the land for park use.

The Army maintains Nike missile launching sites at Forts Barry and Cronkhite. The oblong cleared area east of the barracks is one of the launching sites. Radar posts for observation and missile guidance are on near-by hills.

500 Different Kinds Of Camellias

See Page M-3

IT IS IMPORTANT, Hugh Paterson says, that the camellia grower not allow spent blooms from his plant to lie on the ground. This invites the destructive fungus, petal blight. Paterson finds its easier to pick the faded flowers while they are still on the shrub, instead of waiting and stooping to collect them from the ground.

SINCE THE NATIVE habitat of the camellia is the rain forest of Asia, it is not surprising that these plants prefer overhead sprinkling — especially during warm weather. Mrs. Hugh Paterson gives some of the Paterson camellias a drink while at the same time washing insect pests from their foliage. (Independent-Journal photos)

HERE YOU get a general view of just a portion of the more than an acre of camellias which make up the Hugh Paterson garden in Los Ranchitos. Since the terrain slopes, the Patersons grow most of their camellias in containers. Otherwise, some kind of terracing and retaining structure are necessary to hold the earth and plantings. The trees are deciduous oaks.

Camellias By The Hundreds

By DON KEOWN

But he estimates that he and Mrs. Paterson have between 700 and 800 camellia plants, representing 400 to 500 different varieties, growing in their yard of slightly more than an acre at their home at 16 Red Rock Way, Los Ranchitos.

And they are still buying and adding more camellia plants to their garden.

While Paterson was residing in San Rafael and teaching mathematics at San Rafael High School, he had only a few camellias among his plants.

THEN, IN 1949, he married Adele Newcomer, who also taught math at San Rafael High.

They moved into the Los Ranchitos home with its spacious grounds. And almost immediately they began acquiring camellias.

"She had always wanted a garden," Paterson says, "and finally, she had the space for one."

Of their camellia collection, Paterson adds: "She is really the one who has sparked the thing. She can't visit the nursery without coming back with at least one new camellia. And usually, she brings back several."

PATERSON says they have by no means exhausted all the different varieties of camellias. There are some 80 species, but the American imports of this beautiful native of Asia's rain forests have been generally limited to three—the Japonicas, the Reticulatas and the Sasanquas.

Paterson says there are 5,000 known varieties of Japonicas alone, 30 to 40 different Reticulatas and about 100 Sasanquas.

The huge Paterson collection also includes some of the

It produces buds the size of an egg and flowers the diameter of a salad plate.

An Art Judge Looks For Fresh Approach And Truth In Painting

By RUTH ALEXANDER

"In art, faithful representation is a worn-out standard," says Edith P. Truesdell, Mill Valley painter and art teacher who will be a juror in next weekend's Fourth Annual Sausalito Art Show.

But she adds, "I doubt if abstract is always genuine."

If these two statements seem contradictory, consider further:

"Photography does such a beautiful job of communicating reality; art should do something a little different. The role of the artist has got to be interpretive, to bring some new contribution, some element that is the artist's own, to bring a work of art to life."

BUT IT IS possible to fail to communicate when leaving reality behind. Mrs. Truesdell feels that some modern art verges on charlatanism. "The motive too often is not an honest effort to manipulate art technique, but just to be in style."

In judging, what she looks for in a work of art is some fresh approach or statement of truth genuine to that person—that rings true because it is his alone.

This attitude has enabled her to walk that fine line between the conservative and the far-out in her own painting (in spite of early New England training in rigid academic standards), and to be a successful teacher in classes composed of painters of varying ability and approach.

AND THIS WEEK she will be working with two distinguished art authorities of very different points of view when they serve as a three-man jury of selection and awards for the Sausalito Woman's Club sponsored annual free art show. The task of choosing a first-rate collection of work to represent the Sausalito community will be shared with Ralph DuCasse, one of the West's outstanding modern painters, and with Kenneth Slaughter, manager of Maxwell Galleries of San Francisco.

These three art experts will, therefore be using broad standards in jurying and judging the work submitted by Sausalito artists for the show next Saturday and Sunday. It will be hung in the Sausalito Woman's Club, 120 Central Avenue, Sausalito, from 1 to 5 p.m., and will feature $425 in cash prizes with a special division for school children in addition to the main categories of oil, watercolor, collage, graphics, sculpture, mosaics, plastics, ceramics, silk screen and textiles.

BUT, AS IN the courts, "a jury may not always be perfect, but it is the best method we have for putting on a good art show," says Mrs. Truesdell.

"The Boston Independent Show always used to be hung alphabetically," she noted, "no jury, paintings hung 10 high — funniest thing you ever saw."

Too large a jury is like herding sheep around. "The loud and the pig-headed may win out," she says. "A one-man jury makes for a successful show, but it is often one-sided and may not be typical of a region."

Three is the ideal number, she feels.

LOCALLY, Edith Truesdell is better known as a teacher than a painter, as for the past 10 years she has conducted classes in Marin County which have ranged from critique seminars for practicing artists to beginner classes for housewives. (Interestingly enough, she prefers teaching adults to children. She says children are more "hidebound," especially after the fourth grade.)

She is not currently a member of any organized art group and seldom exhibits in the Marin area, but has won a number of awards in other areas including the Dalzell-Hatfield Gold Medal and prize at the Los Angeles Art Museum for oil painting, a gold medal at Laguna Beach, and awards from the California Watercolor Society and the Los Angeles County show.

She studied at the Boston Art Museum School.

AT THAT time art education consisted of a intensive drilling in drawing and painting from life, and that only.

After a few years of teaching and her marriage, she was up against the painful process of adjusting from ultra-conservatism to a state of mind more in tune with the time.

Fortunately her new type of life helped. Her husband's work — he was a water law specialist in the U. S. Indian Service — involved much moving about, especially in the West.

She developed a sketching technique which never failed to intrigue the small fry at such places as Arizona reservations. By standing in the back of their old convertible, with a piece of plywood covering the front seat, she had a fine table and a view of everything.

WHEN HOME (in Los Angeles) she pitched into the varied activities of a functioning artist, exhibiting, awards, one-man shows, art clubs, jury duty, etc. But at any moment the routine might be interrupted by a telegram from an irate Indian reservation superintendent: His Indians needed help, "the ranchers above are hogging the entire flow, only trickle coming through, stop, come at once."

Bundles, briefcases, paints, bedrolls, everything was hurled into the Chevy, and off they went, day or night. Not surprisingly, her paintings began to take new directions. Boston and the old traditional viewpoint seemed far off.

Then suddenly the pattern changed again. Because of her husband's ill health and early retirement, Mrs. Truesdell went back to teaching. For 14 years she didn't paint at all.

AFTER HER husband's death in 1953, she settled in Mill Valley. She built a small house where she could sit on a deck and look across a valley, and where she could write, paint and teach.

"Edie" has many devoted friends among Marin County artists who have studied with her and enjoyed her lively wit and trenchant criticisms. Her classes feature gallery-style critique; the artists do their painting at home, in any style or medium they prefer.

Fees have always been the least of her interests. Usually she has charged a set amount and then refunded it all at the end of the course, minus payment for the classes one has missed.

MILL VALLEY PAINTER and teacher Edith P. Truesdell appreciates all kinds of art, as long as the approach is genuine and the statement meaningful. Thus she is ideally qualified for her role as one of the three art authorities making up the jury for the Fourth Annual Sausalito Art Show to be held next Saturday and Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m., at the Sausalito Woman's Clubhouse in Sausalito.

TWO KEY FIGURES in next weekend's Fourth Annual Sausalito Woman's Club Art Show are Alice Scarborough, left, general chairman for the free exhibit, and Edith P. Truesdell, who will serve on the jury of selection and awards. Above, they examine some of Mrs. Truesdell's own paintings.

Home In Forest Park

Kaehler-Farrar Development, Inc. set itself a tough goal at the outset for its Forest Park in the rolling hills south of Novato at the head of Sunset Parkway.

What the firm decided to do was to have designed and to build for the 40-unit development a home that met the very exacting requirements set up at the Women's Congress on Housing held some time ago in Washington, D.C.

The result was the origination of a unique floor plan, and the inclusion of many novel and pleasing features.

The 1,600-square-foot, four-bedroom home sells for $27,-

KITCHENS ARE important. The architect felt this one should be beautiful as well as fully-equipped and efficient. Gordon A. Phillips provided for an illuminated ceiling that brings shadow-free light for the homemaker. A "peek through" over the sink commands a view across the gallery to the front street. And the housewife can stand at the island cooking top and enjoy a view of the covered atrium and back garden.

LIGHT AND spaciousness are both achieved through this unusual use of eight-foot doors. A plus advantage is greatly improved ventilation.

700. It has two baths, an all-electric kitchen, living-dining and family rooms plus "mud room" and four-car garage.

SOME OF the unusual features:

A kitchen with full circle control. From this vital spot in the center of the house, mother can see the frontyard, backyard, dining room, family room and into the bedroom hallway. A drop ceiling is fully illuminated. The cooking top is located on an island around which the family can work and enjoy their snacks.

A sliding wall between dining and family room that permits opening up the living area into a 38-foot-long room for entertaining.

Windows also floor-to-ceiling with screens set in lower half out of line of vision.

Abundant closet space including an ingeniously-designed "Fibber McGee" closet to take odd-shaped items such as ironing boards, vacuums, etc.

A "mud room" where children—or parents— may shed soiled items. In the mud room are the washer-dryer space, overhead cabinets, side area for clothes hamper, etc.

ALTHOUGH there is only one basic floor plan being built at Forest Park, no exterior repeats itself. Variety is attained through use of gables and a hip-roof elevation, by shifting the location of the fireplace, by the use of various exterior woods.

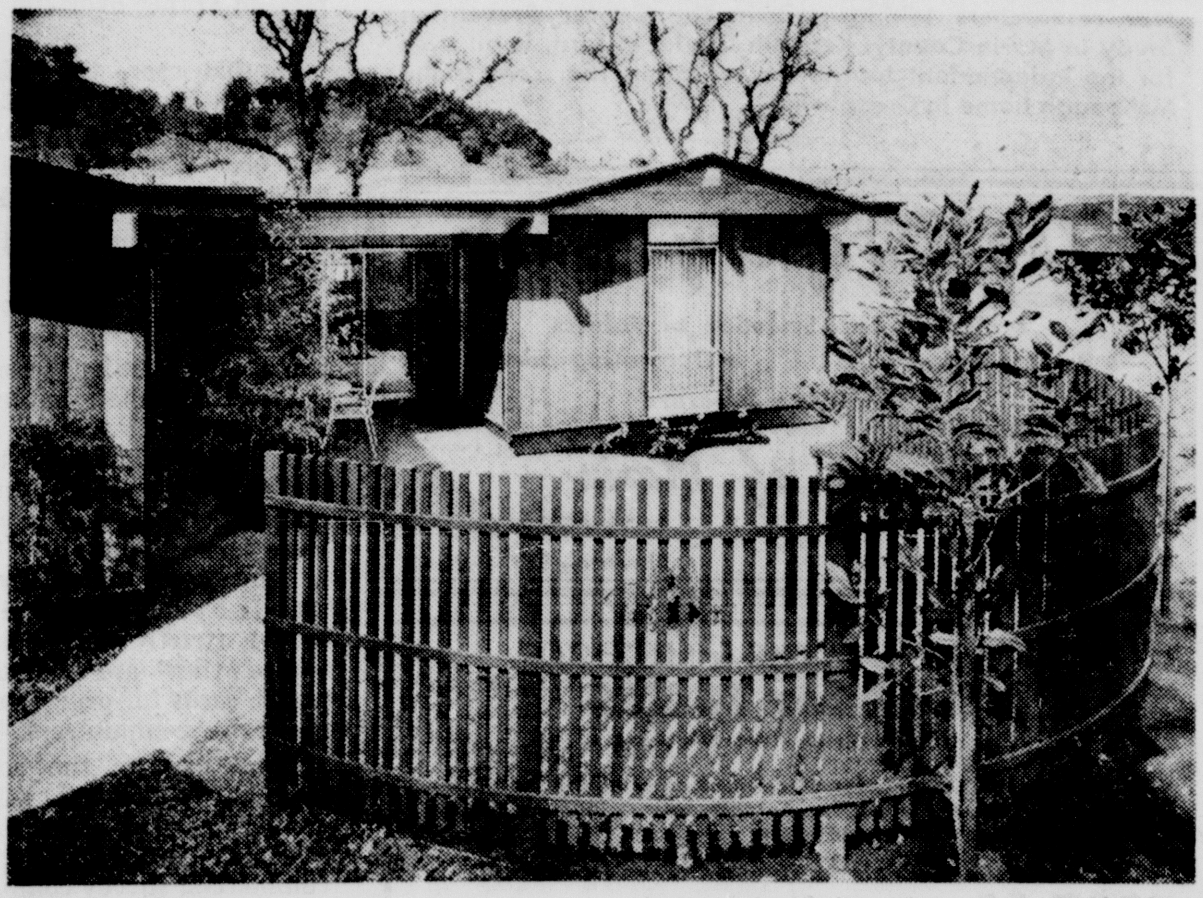
The new Pacific Gas & Electric Co. streamlined utility service reduces wires to major power lines only, eliminating all lead-ins. Telephone lines are underground as is the television which is led into each house from a master antennae on a nearby hillside.

A furnished model home is open daily at 725 Sunset Parkway.

Gordon A. Phillips of San Rafael is the architect, Podesta of Marin the landscaper. Sales are being handled by Bell Associates.



HERE REAL California living — a gracious and private out-of-doors backyard with covered atrium leading directly through three sliding glass doors into the kitchen, centere, family room, right, and fourth bedroom or den at left.

MRS. KENNETH McKEOUGH keeps a watchful eye on two-months-old son Kenneth David as she works on some of the records she must maintain as chairman of the volunteer researchers taking part in the Cancer Prevention Study in Marin County. Kenneth David, in turn, is all eyes for the Independent-Journal cameraman. The scene is the McKeough home in Greenbrae.

Job That Couldn't Be Done

Marinites Play Roles In Cancer Survey Project

By PAUL BRAND

The job that couldn't be done is in its fourth year.

For when the American Cancer Society proposed its six-year Cancer Prevention Study, many commercial survey companies threw up their hands and said it just wasn't possible.

But as Marin volunteers wind up their fourth annual "follow-up," the professionals are admitting that the project is a great success.

Nation-wide, over one million people aged 30 years or older were enrolled by more than 68,000 volunteer researchers.

In Marin County, 72 volunteers, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Kenneth L. McKeough, Greenbrae, have lined up 969 subjects and lost contact with only one. Losing contact with subjects is the major problem of long-term surveys, but Marin's loss ratio is less than one-tenth of 1 per cent!

WHY IS all this being done?

The aims of the project—technically called an epidemiology study—are three-fold:

1. To get more information about people likely to get cancer, so we can concentrate our educational efforts toward reaching those people.

2. To pick up clues as to the causes of cancer, by finding out who gets it and possible relationships to surroundings, heredity and habits.

3. To test hints that are coming from the laboratory.

Such studies are not new to medical science. The first important one relating to cancer and smoking was actually conducted at Montpelier Hospital in France over 100 years ago.

In that case, the subjects were patients with cancer of the mouth, lips and tongue. The observation was that they were all smokers of clay pipes.

TODAY'S study is infinitely more complex.

When the project began, over a million "guinea pigs" filled out detailed questionnaires about their habits, occupations, family backgrounds, medical histories and answers to other personal questions. The questionnaires were forwarded to New York in envelopes sealed by the subject (all information is held strictly confidential), where they are coded on punch cards for processing by electronic computers.

Total cost to the society over the six years will be about $300,000. This is not high, bearing in mind that commercial survey companies wanted anywhere from 15 million dollars to 45 million dollars to do the earlier smoking survey, using only 22,000 researchers.

Volunteers Serve As Subjects And Researchers In Program

The American Cancer Society meets such costs with contributions from local county branches and other sources.

FOR EXAMPLE, one-third of the money raised in Marin during the current Annual Cancer Crusade will be devoted to national research projects, such as the Cancer Prevention Study. Another 49 per cent will remain in Marin to support two local programs — public education and free services to cancer patients.

This low cost approach is made possible by the many thousands of hours of hard work put in by Mary McKeough and her researchers. As gaps have shown up in returns from the annual follow-ups, every missing person has been traced and accounted for —except one.

And like the FBI and the Mounties, Mrs. McKeough will never close her file on an unsolved case.

Of the original 969 Marinites involved as subjects, there have been 41 deaths. Eight persons have asked to drop out. To keep track of the roll effectively, inquiries have been sent throughout the United States and even to Europe, where six subjects still play their part by mail.

EACH YEAR, some of the key information is brought up to date — such as location, history of illness. Extra questions have been added such as the one asking about the amount of air pollution in the subject's home area.

And what has been learned from this mass of data?

Full evaluation will take several years after the completion of the six-year cycle, but much has been extracted even while the study is still in progress.

For example, the recent report on the effects of smoking on health by the U.S. Surgeon-General. This report looked to the American Cancer Society for a great deal of its data — drawn from the first, second and third annual follow-ups.

THIS STUDY showed that, in a sample of 422,094 men aged 40 to 89 who were traced for a three-year period, the general death rates are far higher among cigarette smokers than among non-smokers. that they increase with the amount of smoking, and that they are lower in former cigarette smokers who have given up the habit for a year or more.

To be precise, the lung cancer rate was 11 times higher among light smokers, and 18 times higher among "very heavy" smokers than in non-smokers.

Coronary artery disease caused twice as many deaths among light smokers and three times as many deaths among heavy smokers. Death rates were closely related to the degree to which the smoker inhaled and the age at which he began smoking.

As in previous studies, pipe and cigar smoking appeared to be far safer than cigarette smoking.

IN ANOTHER report issued by the California State Department of Health in 1963 it was revealed that, if present trends continue, more than 100,000 California children now attending school will die of lung cancer before the age of 70.

Among other conclusions to emerge from the statistics compiled by the ACS is the indication that although many subjects suffer physical complaints described as cancer danger signals, they do not see a doctor about them. Knowledge of this fact is important to the society's public education program.

It has also indicated that men with occupational exposure to dust and other air impurities have a 30 per cent higher death rate from lung cancer and a 96 per cent higher death rate from all lung diseases than do men without such exposure.

THESE, THEN, are the tools that the Cancer Prevention Study researchers, the subjects and the data processors are putting in the hands of our cancer-fighters.

Some of the lessons learned may be put to use by medical men searching for causes and cures — others only by the commonsense and will-power of those affected.

But as each step upward is made in the future, Mary McKeough and her "guinea pigs" will know that they have played their part. And so will every campaign worker who has ever trudged from door to door at fund-raising time. It will be a good feeling.

THREE GENERATIONS from this Marin County family are playing parts in the American Cancer Society's Cancer Prevention Study. The grandmother, Mrs. Wallace I. Terry, 91, center, is one of the subjects maintaining records. Mother, Mrs. Robertson Ward, right, and daughter, Mrs. Theodore Theiss Jr., are among the researchers serving in the idemiologic research project. Mrs. Ward is also a past president of the Marin Branch of the American Cancer Society.

A Room Full Of History

Marin Library Proud Of Its California Room

IN THE CALIFORNIA ROOM of the Marin County Library at the new Civic Center, County Librarian Virginia Keating reaches for a reference work. The room houses books and other materials relating to Marin and California history, culture and geography, including the Fred W. Pabst collection of photographs of the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire devastation that are reproduced on the pages that follow. (Independent-Journal photo)

Marin County Librarian Virginia Keating calls it her "California Room," but it began as a single glass-fronted bookcase.

Those were the days when the Marin County Library was located in the basement of the courthouse in downtown San Rafael.

DESPITE THE sparsity of space, Mrs. Keating had a dream — a single collection point for the library's growing mass of books and other materials dealing with Marin and California history.

For the time being, the single bookcase had to serve the purpose, inadequate though it was.

Conditions improved only a little when the library moved to the old Coleman School building at 1711 Grand Avenue, San Rafael. There a portion of the entrance hall was partitioned off, to serve as the California Room.

BUT IN THE library's newest quarters in the new Marin Civic Center, Mrs. Keating's dream has at last come true. Architects incorporated into their planning a special California Room for the library.

There Mrs. Keating and her assistants have assembled hundreds of books and other materials relating to local and state history, geography, culture, travel, biography, etc.

Most of the volumes and materials are available to the visiting public. But more valuable books are kept inside a locked bookcase, accessible only with the help of the librarian's key and not to be taken from the library.

THESE GUARDED materials fall into three categories:

1. That which deals with Marin County history and would be impossible to replace. Often the copy in the case is the only one known to exist.

2. Books and materials which would be exceedingly difficult to replace.

3. A special display of books by Marin County authors.

Of the books by Marinites, Mrs. Keating says: "We call it our 'boasting collection.' We like to use it to demonstrate to visitors how many talented and creative people reside within our county."

THERE IS a heavy traffic to the California Room to use the materials. Many of the visitors are scholars and students from out of the county. Also making extensive use of the informative data about Marin are new residents of the county, eager to learn something of the history of their new home.

Scrapbooks compiled by the library staff provide extensive background material on a number of subjects of local and state interest.

Also subjects of great interest are the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire photographs that make up the Fred W. Pabst collection.

OWNER PABST passed his photos on to M. S. Lester of Kentfield when the latter succeeded him as head of the Don Lee Cadillac Co. in San Francisco—with the stipulation that the historic pictures not be sold to a private collector or organization, but be placed somewhere where they would be available for public inspection.

The old pictures, detailing dramatically the havoc which occurred 58 years ago today when the earth shook and flames swept San Francisco, remain in a remarkably good condition.

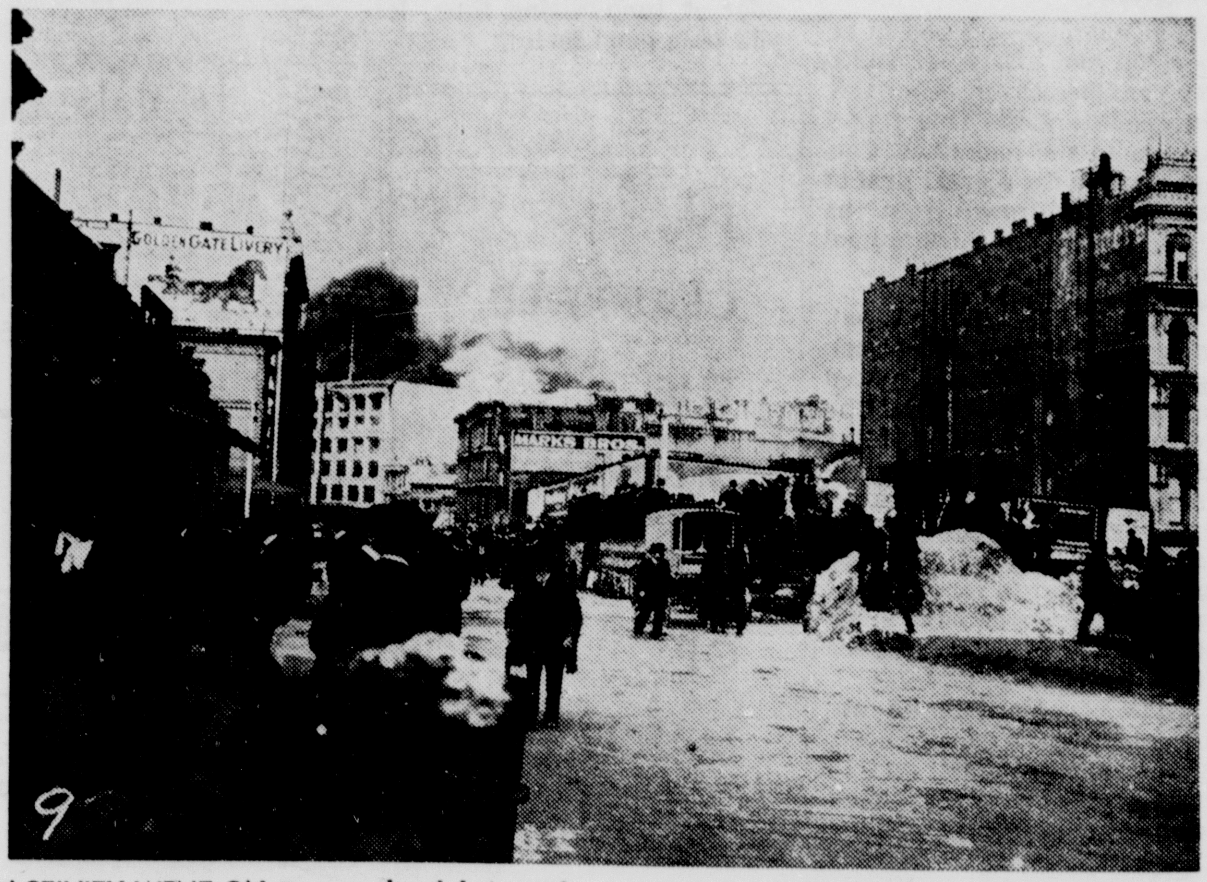
LAST YEAR, Lester presented the photos to the Marin library. And they now hold an honored place among the materials in the California Room collection.

There are other documentary photos to be found in the pleasant room, complete with reading tables, including a most extraordinary set detailing the layout of an early California rancho.

Mrs. Keating says a Marin builder not too long ago used those old pictures to help him in planning a new ranch-style house for a local client.

AMONG ALL this wealth of books, photos, manuscripts and other materials, Mrs. Keating says, there is just one newspaper to be found in the California Room. It's the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine. The bound files of the I-J magazine are kept there, she explains, because of the many articles of Marin historical interest that appear in its pages.

For example, the reproductions of the fire and earthquake pictures from the Fred W. Pabst collection that appear on the following pages of this issue.



ACTIVITY WENT ON among the debris and dangers of the earthquake-stricken city. This photo of San Francisco with the smoke of the after-the-quake fire still to be seen in the background was taken looking along Golden Gate Avenue east from Jones. It is part of the Fred W. Pabst collection.

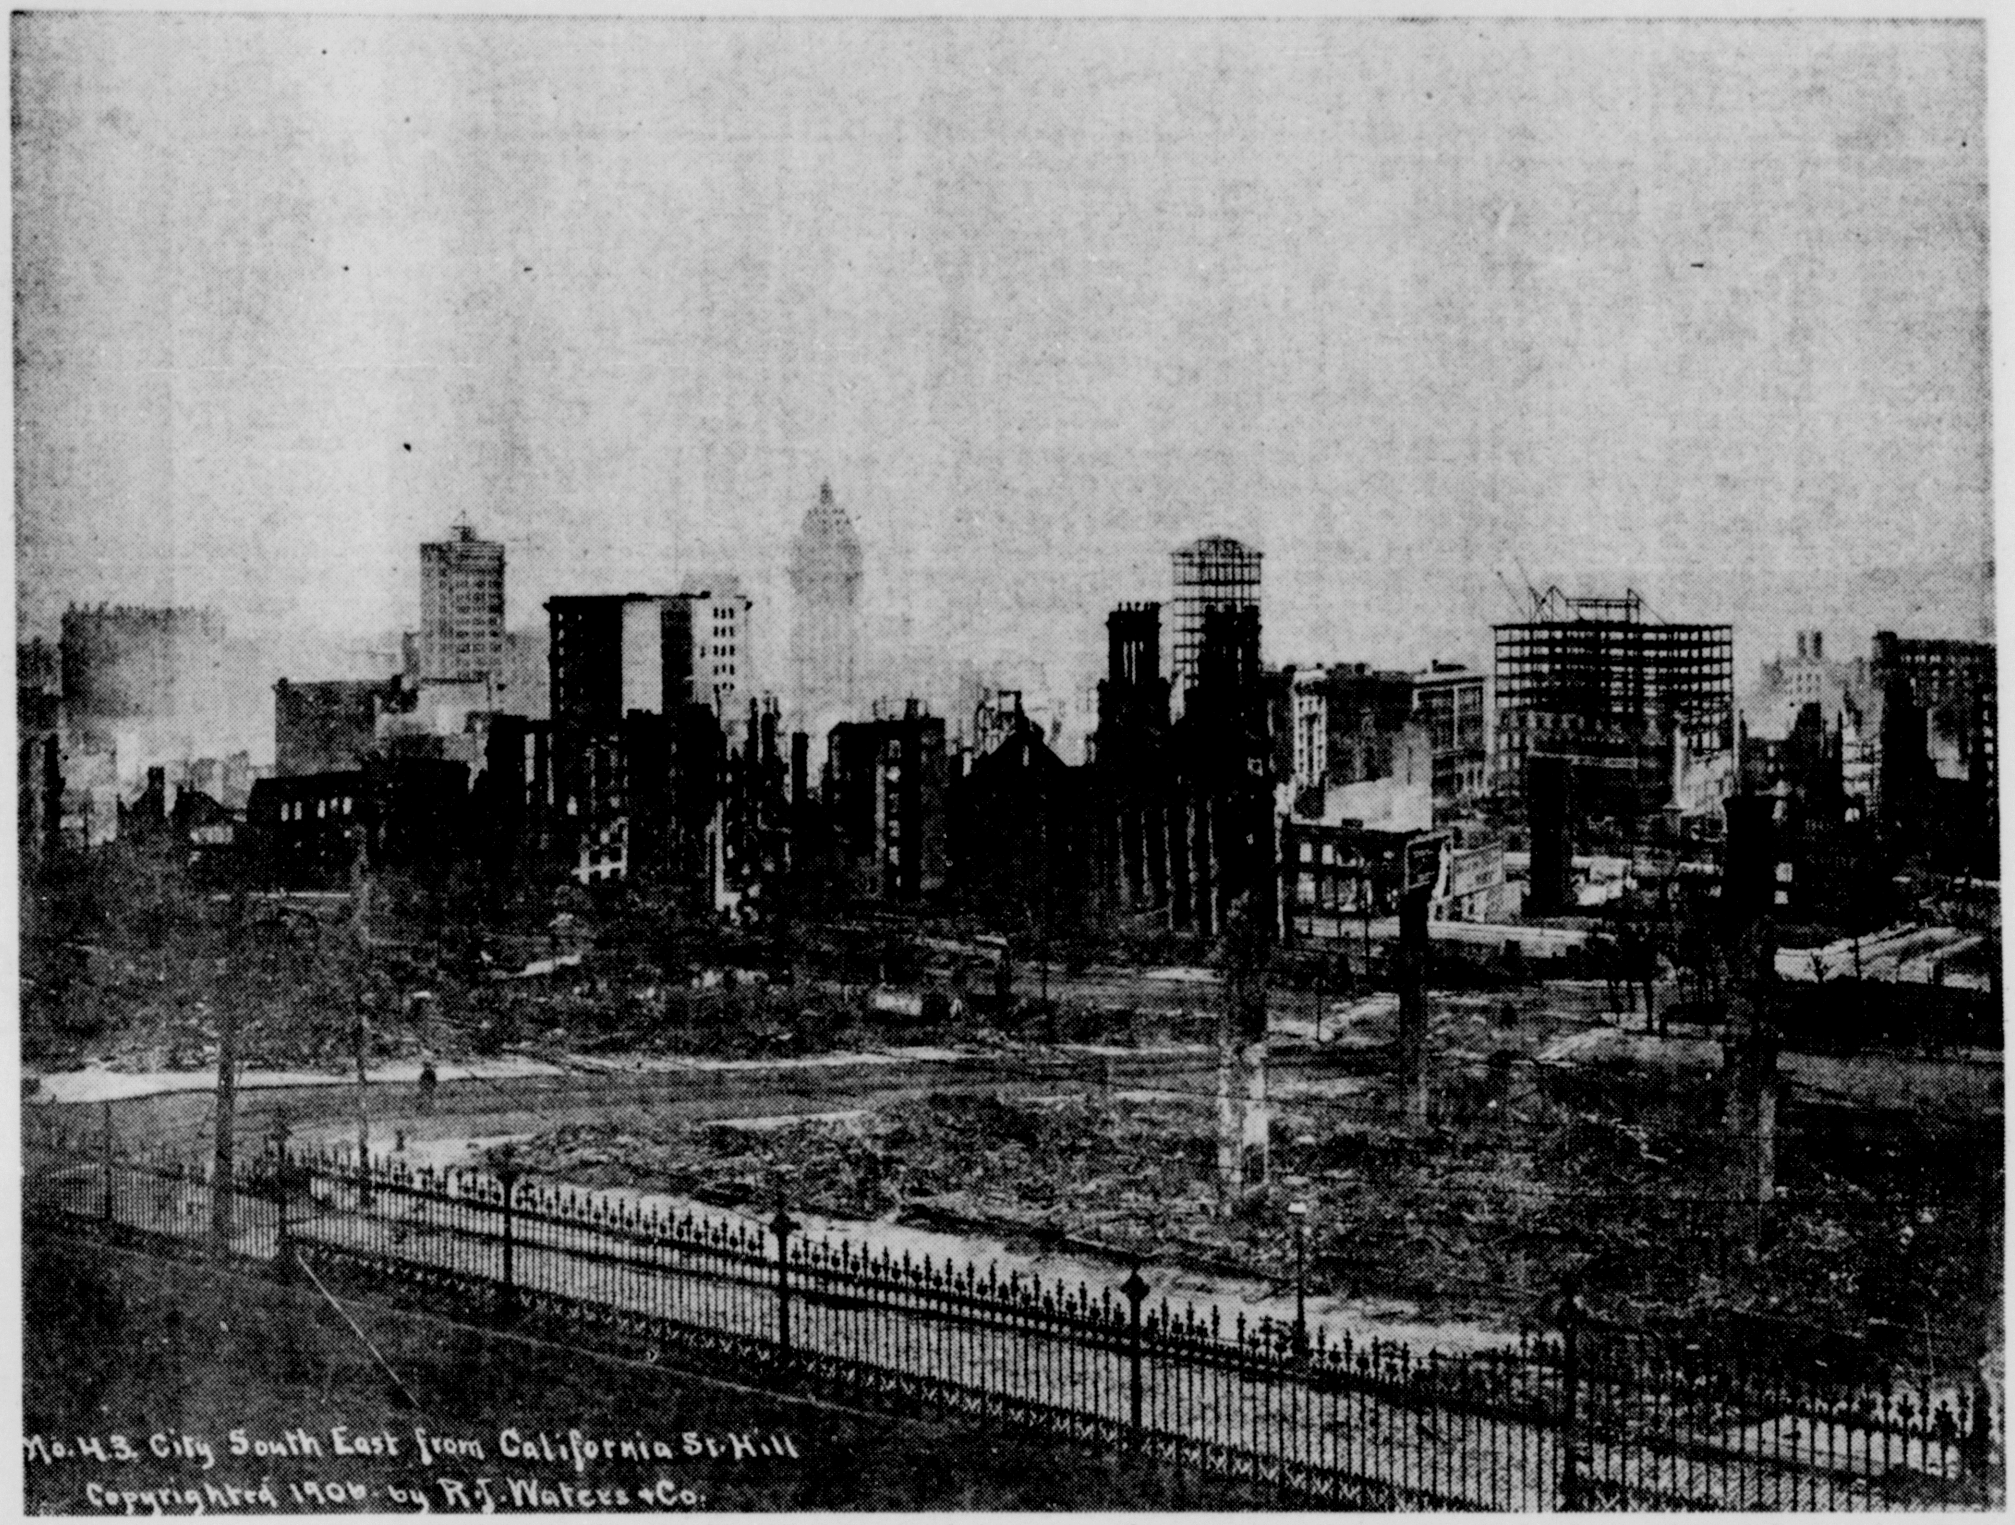
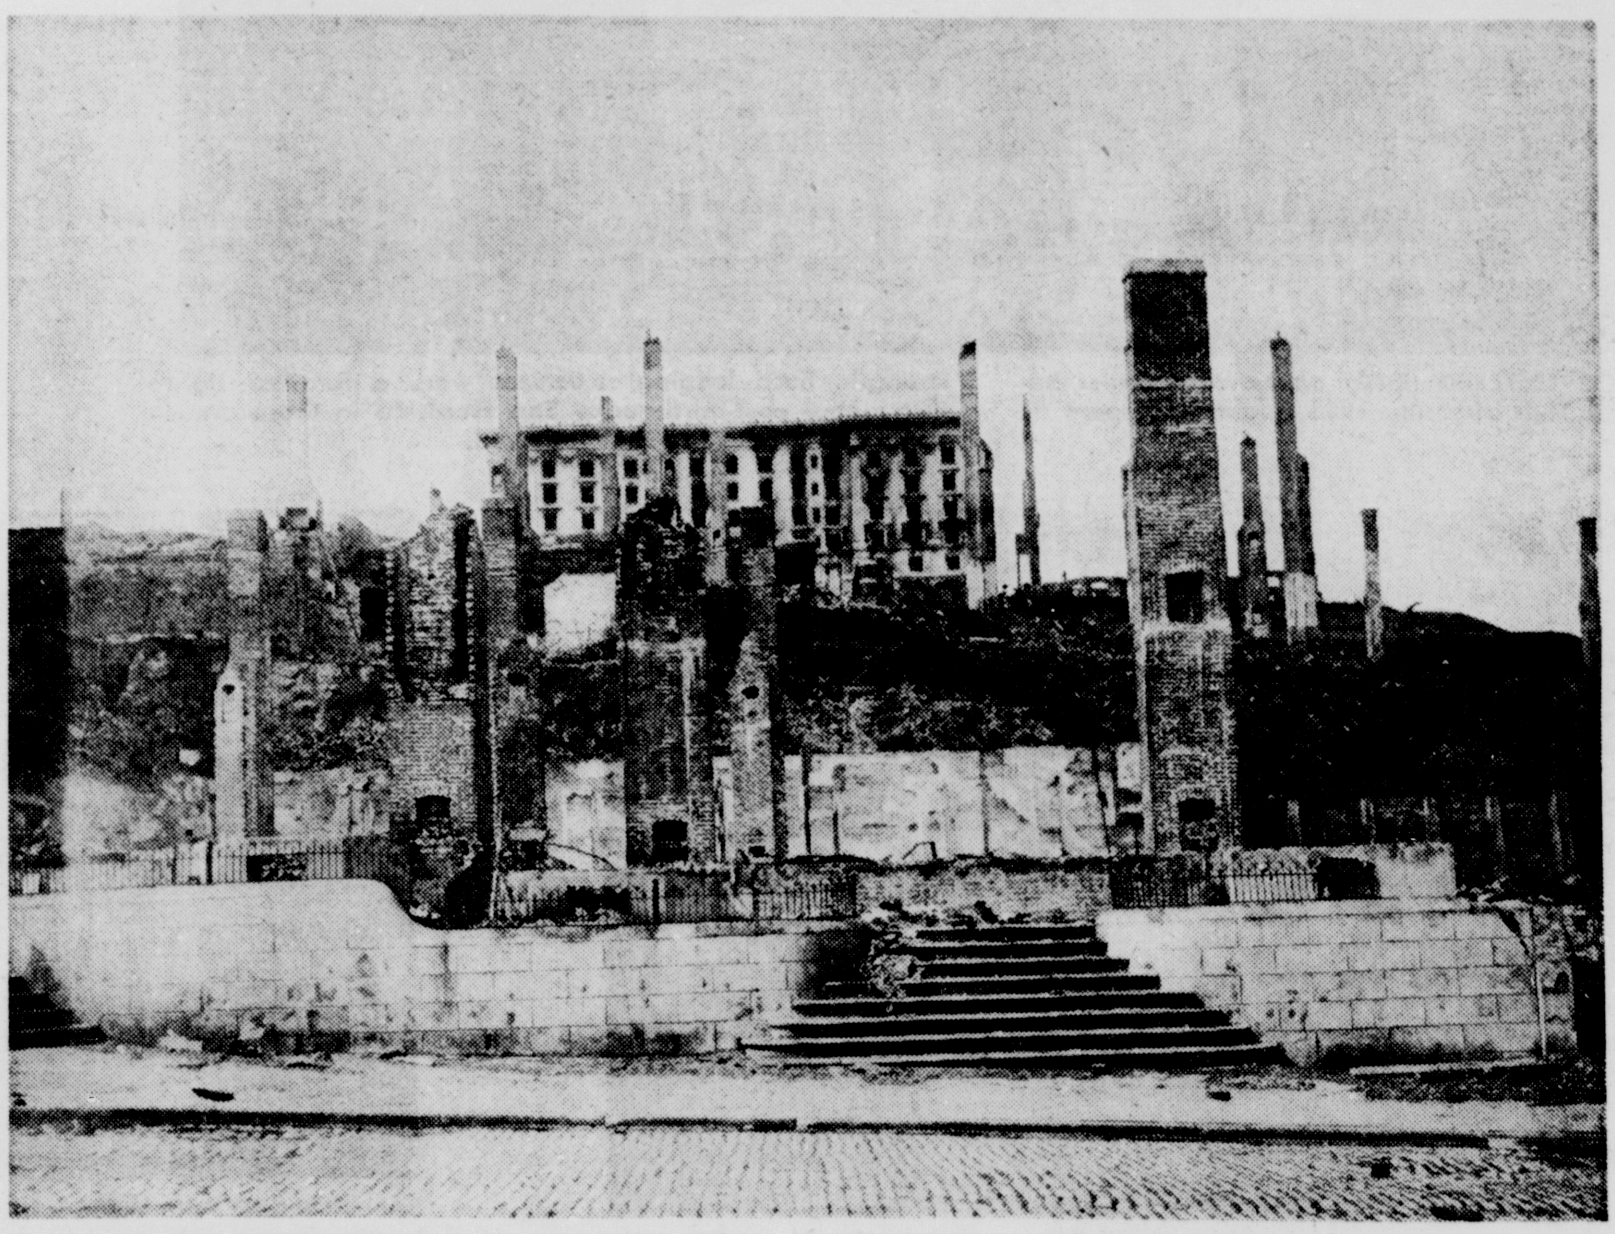
The Pabst Collection Of Quake Photos



STANDING ON THE CALIFORNIA STREET hill after the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906, one could, looking southeast, see this scene of desolation. Buildings in the foreground had been reduced to ruins. Skeletons of structure can be seen in the background. And there was still smoke clouding the more distant buildings. This photograph, from the Fred W. Pabst Collection of rare pictures of the disaster of 58 years ago, bears the notice that it was copyrighted by R. J. Waters and Co.



THIS SHATTERED SPECTACLE of ruin with only a few scattered columns still standing like sentinels could be seen by stunned San Franciscans as they passed the scene on Bush Street left by the ravages of the fire and earthquake. It is one of the more dramatic prints from the historic Pabst collection in the Marin County Library.

EMERGENCY FEEDING facilities and stations for the issuance of other vital supplies for the earthquake and fire-stricken population of San Francisco were set up at strategic points. Here one such station was pictured in operation with ruins in the background.

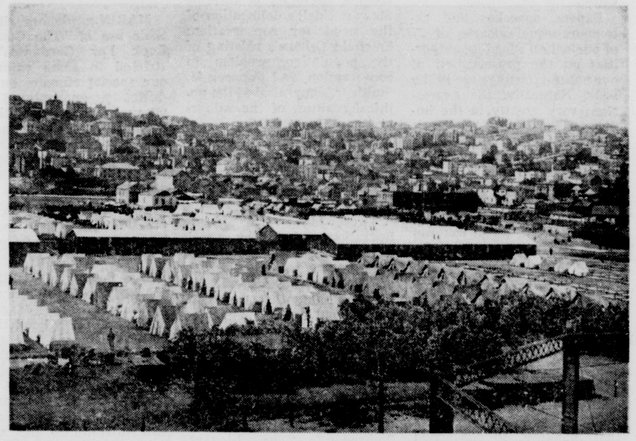
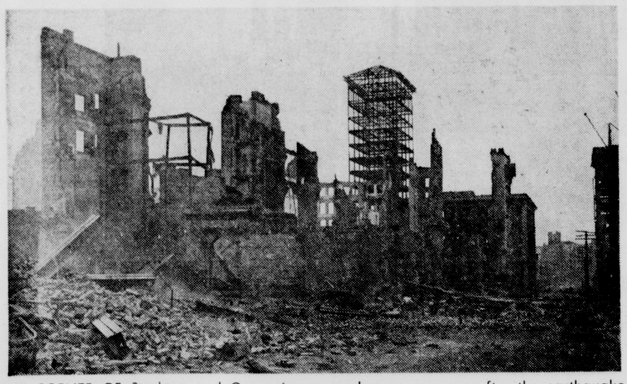
58 Years Ago Today

TWO BUILDINGS TEETERED tipsily on Howard Street between 17th and 18th after the 1906 quake had spent its strength. Such leaning structures were a familiar sight throughout post-earthquake San Franicsco in those areas not razed by the fire that followed.

THE MILITIA TOOK UP the dangerous task of dynamiting and leveling buildings which had been left in the hazardous condition by the earthquake. The legend at the bottom of this photo from the Pabst collection says that the Monadnock Building was the target of this blast.



TEMPORARY TOWNS sprang up in the Bay Area to care for the victims of the 1906 earthquake and fire. This "refugee camp" provided emergency shelter for the homeless at a spot near Fort Mason.



THE CORNER OF Stockton and Geary in San Francisco's business district had this sombre appearance after the earthquake and fire of 1906. Once fine buildings lay demolished.

SAN FRANCISCANS WERE left in a state of shock by the fury which struck them without warning on April 18,1906. Here, still stunned workers and residents examine some of the damage inflicted upon their streets, walks and buildings by the shaking of the earth. It was, until the recent Alaskan disaster, North America's most severe earthquake.

SAN FRANCISCO'S once-impressive city hall was just one of the many public buildings reduced to shells by the quake and the fire that followed. The Fred W. Pabst photo collection was presented to M. S. Lester of Kentfield when the latter succeeded the former as head of the Don Lee Cadillac Co. It was Lester who placed the historic photographs in the Marin library.

Many Faces Of Mother Nature Reflected In The New Reading

By DON KEOWN

"Tomorrow's Wilderness" is a compilation of the proceedings of the Eighth Wilderness Conference, as edited by Francois Leydet of Belvedere.

We cannot be certain as to just how much use dedicated conservationist Leydet made of his blue pencil, but we wish it had been a bit more. The book reads a little like a verbatim report of the conference. And such conferences, no matter how interesting or significant the subject matter, are bound to contain a lot that is formality, repetitious, extraneous or meaningful only to professionals and those most deeply committed to the cause.

Papers, speeches and extemporaneous remarks of 27 of our nation's leading authorities on the preservation of our natural heritage are in the book. Naturally, the expressions vary greatly in the import of the topics, the merit of the observations and the effectiveness of the presentations. More persuasive arguments on behalf of the wilderness preservation concept to which the conference was dedicated tend to be watered down somewhat by the inclusion of the less persuasive and more specialized. And many of the latter might have been honed to keener acuity by less restrained editing.

Some of the more thought-provoking contents include James P. Gilligan's general summation of the need for and status of the wilderness movement; J. Ralph Audy's thesis that mankind, so concerned with plant weeds, has become something of an animal weed himself in nature's scheme of things; fascinating discussions by Athelstan Spilhaus' of man's exploitation of the sea and by Chauncey D. Leake of our pollution of the air; Marinite Lawrence Halprin's suggestion that a major step toward relieving the pressure on our wilderness areas would be the planning of more livable cities; Carl W. Buchheister's eloquent indictment of man's devastation of bird and animal species; Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall's delineation of the need for conservation; Fairfield Osborn's relating of the population problem to conservation, and Spencer M. Smith Jr.'s appraisal of the political realities of the wilderness movement.

Stephen H. Spurr's advocacy of some limited management for primitive areas triggered the conference's principal controversy.

Twenty-nine varnished illustrations—photos by Ansel Adams, Ray Atkeson and others—demonstrate the beauty of the wilderness as well as the despoiling that man can bring about.

We doubt that "Tomorrow's Wilderness" will be quite the intended telling weapon on behalf of the Sierra Club's campaign for conservation that such predecessor books as the more pictorial "The Last Redwoods," "The Elegant Light" and "Island in Time" have been. On such a scenic subject, pictures are usually more effective with the general public than words. But "Tomorrow's Wilderness" offers, for those who do persevere and read it, much food for thought and challenge for the conscience.

ALSO OF special interest to Marinites who love the outdoors is "Beachwalker's Guide," written by Frank Van Schaick, illustrated with photos and drawings by Dick Smith and published by the busy Santa Barbara house of McNally & Loftin.

It's suitable for both adult and child. It will enrich those strolls along the seashore that so many Marinites enjoy, pointing out to them the wealth of marine life that is there to be seen by the alert—and relating background behind those sights. It is, in short, the ideal companion for the hike on the beach, and also enjoyable and informative when read from the comfort of the living room armchair.

MARIN gardeners will find their use of "The Complete Book For Gardeners" restricted to some extent by our special climate, but this difficulty, encountered with all such books originating in other geographical areas, has been somewhat minimized by editor Rachel Snyder through the use of zone maps and regional advice.

The book itself is an impressive one, very comprehensive and beautifully illustrated.

Miss Snyder, also editor-in-chief of the highly respected Flower and Garden Magazine, has aimed for a book that is both valuable as a reference source and also enjoyable to green thumbers purely as reading material about their favorite hobby. She has had the splendid support of D. Van Nostrand Co. Inc., a publisher that does not go into these projects half-heartedly.

The result is a big book which Marinites, even with the afore-mentioned geographical problem in mind, you will find both useful and interesting. The manner in which a staggering amount of material has been organized and presented for quick reference is especially worthy of commendation.

PROBING ONE of the grimmer, more violent facets of Mother Nature's complex character is "Earthquake Country" by Robert Iacopi.

While copiously and effectively illustrated, this is no picture book. Iacopi has provided a text that illuminates and places in proper perspective a subject relevant to every Californian.

Iacopi puts it this way at the outset: "Earthquakes are a part of California's heritage, and we must learn to live with them. But the dangers involved are more a result of man's ignorance than of nature's destructive force."

By "man's ignorance" he means our insistence upon erecting shoddy, flimsy construction in the danger areas.

The book explores the geological causes, mechanics and history of California quakes with an explanation of how we measure their intensity. Much of the book is devoted to an examination, section by section, of the fault system in California. (The chapter covering that part of the San Andreas Fault passing through Marin County begins on page 145.)

Iacopi closes with discussions of future earthquake prospects, and some commonsense advice on what to do in the event of a major quake.

He says: "California's next great earthquake may take place while you are reading this book, or it may not come during your lifetime. But one thing is sure: It is definitely on the way."

He quotes Dr. Charles F. Richter as holding a reoccurrence of the 1857 Southern California tremors to be our most likely next major quake, with a repeat of the 1906 Northern California disaster as the next most probable. " . . . The long, quiet period may be significant," it is noted concerning the San Andreas Fault of this area.

It is a sobering book that does not minimize the earthquake peril, yet eliminates the wilder myths. It is also a convincing plea for adherence to sound building codes and standards, and a reminder of the importance of avoiding panic should Mother Nature renew her angry writhings.

KILO FORTY by Miles Tripp, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 201 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Four people are camping and fishing in isolation on the Red Sea at the edge of the Egyptian desert near the Gulf of Suez. Two of the men and the lone woman have their weaknesses. But the third man is ruthless, sadistic, totally immoral.

It is a gripping story, superbly written. And just the thing for the reader who likes something out of the ordinary in his suspense reading.

"What Made These Holes in My Knit Cocktail Dress?"

You know that you did not snag your luxurious, double-knit gown, but when it returned from the cleaner's there were holes in it. That is a complaint we are receiving more and more often now that wool knits are more popular. There is a simple one word answer for this. Moths.

Many of the new knit fashions are either 100% wool or wool and cotton combinations. They are being used in more formal evening wear too, especially when gold and silver yarns are interwoven.

Most of these garments are stored at home for the off-season. There they become infested with moths and considerable damage results. This damage may not be noticed until after cleaning. Then the broken yarns ravel and an unseen hole may enlarge to an inch in diameter. This, of course, is not the fault of your dry-cleaner. His one fault might be in failing to examine your knit dress inch-by-inch to anticipate possible moth damage before accepting it. Do not store wool or wool-combination garments at home. Have them cleaned professionally, then have your cleaner store them for you.

REPORTS FROM OUR REVIEWERS

The First Lady

MRS. LBJ by Ruth Montgomery, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 212 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

The first of what promises to be a covey of Lady Bird books is out, written by Washington reporter Ruth Montgomery, who has turned out a chatty, informal biography of the East Texas girl now this nation's number one hostess.

The Lady Bird who emerges from this admiring portrait is a pleasant, unruffled person equal to any situation. As wife of Senator, Vice President and now President Lyndon B. Johnson, she has served a long apprenticeship for her present role. Often she was called upon to sit opposite President John F. Kennedy at state dinners at the White House, pinch-hitting for Mrs. Kennedy whenever she was away from Washington. And increasingly the Johnsons took on the entertainment of foreign and local dignitaries at their home — formerly Perle Mesta's—and the LBJ ranch.

As a typical day, she recounts: "At 9 o'clock I had a Spanish lesson, interrupted to make an appointment for Lynda with the dentist and Lucy with geometry tutor; 11 o'clock I opened the National Cathedral flower show; at 1 o'clock, attended luncheon for the Heart Fund and made a little speech; 2:30 to 5, I answered mail; 5 o'clock, entertained 35 Peace Corps Volunteers; at 6, an emergency call had me dispatching Lyndon's tux to the Capitol; then I dressed and joined him at 7:45 at the White House for dinner."

Real And Unreal

The author, long a student of the occult, neatly blends his knowledge of psychic phenomena with the cold war.

Carrying the reader through two worlds, the "real" world of secret agents and the unreal world of spiritualists, he wrings the last bit of suspense from each.

At the head of the tale is a top U.S. scientist who is on the verge of tipping off the Russians to a vital defense secret at the urging of his dead daughter.

The scientist is convinced that he is in communication with his deceased daughter, and he has her hand to prove it . . . even though she was cremated.

Into this puzzle steps Alexander Hero, chief investigator for the British Society of Psychical Research, and the spine-tingling begins.

Despite the fast pace, the author sustains an eerie mood of the spirit world. Sessions with a medium are especially compelling. At the same time the tricks of the spiritualist trade are unmasked, revealing fraud behind the trappings.

Gallico's mixture of suspense and supernatural should please fans in both fields and readers in general.

The Neglected

Here is a rare find.

Dr. Young, a professor of casework in the School of Social Administration at Ohio State University, is a fine writer. She shows great professional control and objectivity in presenting her subject—a study of child neglect and abuse.

She illustrates her study with many horrifying case histories, but because of her professionalism and restraint one can finish this cogent book without being hysterically inclined to jump to conclusions as to what causes some adults to contribute to the death of helpless children through neglect and others to apparently delight in torturing their innocent victims.

Leontine Young states that it is not her purpose to offer at this time a complete plan of action to prevent further neglect and abuse, but she will be satisfied if, through this book, she succeeds in arousing the public to the seriousness and scope of the problem.

Allegorical Novel

THE FAIR by Robert Nathan Alfred A. Knopf, 208 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Dorothy Gardiner.

Author Robert Nathan displays a rare gift of whimsy, wit, imagination and scholarship in this allegorical novel dealing with universal problems of mankind during the legendary time of Britain's King Arthur.

A small band of Celtic survivors — a fair maiden, her squire, young cousin, nursemaid and a well meaning abbot who tutors the children—flee the invaders and are quickly joined by the young girl's guardian angel, who also is the first Negro any of the band has seen.

Nathan weaves around this band a warm and profound commentary on the philosophical hedges and social problems of human nature.

The group lives conveniently in a transitory time of young Christianity, established Druid paganism, ancient Greek mythology, fading Roman influence and fledgling nationalism. This melting pot of ideas soon enmeshes the reader in a web of questions and answers still plaguing mankind today.

The tale is a delightful episode for the romantic of nature or those who enjoy a literary journey to a slightly different depth and happier frame of mind.

Stereo Hi-Fi

By C. J. Catania

TAPE RECORDERS are becoming increasingly popular for home entertainment. Surprisingly enough however, many possibilities that the tape recorder offers.

One of the very important features, of course, is the playing of stereo music tapes for musical enjoyment and background. You can use the quarter track pre-recorded tapes now available in abundance, or you can record your own tapes off-the-air from stereo broadcasts. To record stereo broadcasts you must have a stereo multiplex type tuner, and generally a good antenna system to bring in clean undistorted program material. To record, you merely connect two patch cords from the output of the tuner, or in some cases from the output of the associated preamp, into the radio/phono input jack of the tape recorder. Set the playback and recording levels so that the recording indicator does not show too much signal going into the recorder.

Another very important use is the recording of important events around the home, such as the children's parties, baby's first words, vacations, narration for movies or slides etc.

A newer use for tape recorders is sound on sound. You record a musical solo, for instance, on one sound track then you transfer this solo from track one to track two by re-recording. At the same time that you are re-recording, you listen to the solo and add a harmony part by using the microphone. You can continue by transfering the two musical parts back to track one and again adding another part. A similar technique is used for language learning. The master track (the teacher's track) is generally placed on track one with appropriate spaces between the pronouncement of words or phrases. The student listens to the master track then repeats the word or phrase at the same time recording it. Then by rewinding and playing back, the student can compare his pronounciations with the teacher's. The student can erase his track and re-record over and over until he has perfected the lesson.

If some of these uses for a tape recorder sound confusing, visit our TAPE CLINIC which will be held all day Saturday on April 25th. Demonstrations will be made, your questions will be answered. A Robert's factory man will be present to help out.

Show Music And Jazz By Miles

By JOHN SUNIER

Broadway tunes and some jazz:

Kurt Weill's "Lady in the Dark" with Rise Stevens, Adolph Green and John Reardon — Columbia Stereo OS 2390:

This was one of the most part-breaking Broadway musicals of all the important works of Weill. This new lp fills a need for a recording of highlights from the appealing score.

The biggest tunes are "My Ship," "This is New," "Tschaikowsky" (which launched Danny Kaye's career), and "The Saga of Jenny," all about the girl who couldn't make up her mind. Although the Ira Gershwin lyrics may now seem dated in places, Weill's captivating way with a melody saves the day.

Noel Coward's "The Girl Who Came to Supper" with Jose Ferrer, Florence Henderson and Roderick Cook (Original Broadway Cast) — Columbia Stereo KOS 2420:

Typically Noel Coward throughout: Glitter and glamour mixed with a little wistfulness and sadness among the international set.

Jose Ferrer, who does a fairly good job of trying to sing, even sounds much like Coward himself in delivery. One rather funny scene, in which the heroine performs snatches from a corny musical production at breakneck speed, doing all the voices herself, is lifted from an identical idea in the recent musical "Subways Are For Sleeping."

While it has its moments, I'm afraid this one is no better than Mr. Coward's last musical, "Sail Away," which flopped.

Gene Krupa in "Drummin' Man" — Columbia C2L 29:

Latest in an epoch-making series of jazz re-issues collections from this label.

Following hard on the heels of the wonderful Ellington collection Volume I, it follows a tough act, but has plenty of interest to sustain it. It covers the period from the late 1930s to the late 40s and features top names such as Roy Eldridge, Anita O'Day, Frank Rosolino, Charlie Ventura, Sam Donahue, Dave Lambert and others who either got their start or rose to higher fame in various Krupa bands.

Krupa was the first drummer to "show off" the solo possibilities of that instrument. He made drum solos a standard item in any evening of big band music and made the general public more aware of the importance of this instrument previously relegated only to keeping time.

The fine booklet of notes contains many photos and a running commentary on the tracks by Krupa himself.

Many of the instrumental tracks hold up very well even today, with great solos by the many great names associated with Krupa over the years. The Krupa Trio gets in a few licks too (with Charlie Ventura and Teddy Napoleon).

This is the first Evans-Davis collaboration since the magnificent "Sketches of Spain." It is a collection of tracks that Miles has done since that lp; one of them, "For Summer Night," by the Quintet alone, without orchestra.

This is probably the last bossa nova album for a major jazzman to turn out, after the fad has really petered out, but what Miles and Gil do here is to make the wait worthwhile. They have been working on this material for three years.

Simply gorgeous in every way.

AMONG THE SIX weavers to be seen at their looms at next weekend's "Designs for Peace" sale of arts and crafts at the Peace Center of Marin headquarters, 267 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley, is Dominic Di Mare, San Rafael High School teacher pictured above in his Tiburon home with some of his work. Di Mare, 32, son of a Monterey fisherman, studied art at San Francisco State, Rudolph Shaffer School of Design, Monterey Peninsula College and the College of Arts and Crafts at Oakland. A college course marked his first contact with weaving. Three years ago, he resumed the craft and he is largely self-taught. He uses a Mexican Zapotec knotting technique which he has extended into a three-dimensional or sculptural form. Next weekend's sale of arts and crafts with artisans at work and guitar music will be held Saturday and Sunday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Proceeds will go to the Turn Toward Peace, Marin County, program. VIBRANT COLOR scenes are available to the home gardener by the wide choice of bedding plants. These plants can be grouped to form endless patterns or dynamic variations of color. Now is the time to choose summer bedding plants. Plan now for a garden which could include begonias, salvia, ageratum, alyssum, verbena, heliotrope, petunias, dwarf marigolds, canna and lantana. Your local nurseryman has a complete selection from which to choose. (Photo courtesy California Assn. of Nurserymen)

Silhouettes For The Garden

The sun through a thoughtfully thinned grape vine trained over a pergola; a clematis forming a Japanese-screen pattern on a treillis dividing patio from service area; the black outline of the limbs of the Australian Tea Tree as it stands gracefully between you and the sun — all these are garden effects worth attempting.

There are some ardent gardeners who go to the trouble of training ivy in patterns on a fence; of twisting shrubs and trees to suit their purpose and thereby making beautiful landscapes. This is great fun if you have the time and inclination, but you can create many beautiful garden pictures with judicious planting and selection of the proper shrubs and trees and very little effort or care. Surprisingly enough, most of the plants that will make wonderful silhouette patterns for you are as easy to grow as California natives.

THE GERALDTON Waxflower, a native of Western Australia, like many another Australian loves it in California.

It makes a shrub up to 12 feet high and spreading from eight to 10 feet. Its open habit of growth with its brown stems and almost feathery, bright green little leaves makes it a natural tracery plant set against a white wall or ornamental fence. It is one of those see-through plants which can be set to cover or separate an area. When the Waxflower grows up it will cover a given area allowing you to see out but preventing the neighbors or passersby from getting a clear view in.

While the Geraldton Waxflower has lovely, waxy little cup-shaped, pink-hued flowers at its branch-ends for about three months, beginning in March, its importance as a year-round shrub is its feathery foliage and brown limbs that present an unusual appearance. It likes hot, well-drained places, will take pruning to shape.

Another Australian that can serve us well as a silhouette plant is Wormwood Senna or Feathery Cassia, which not only shows to advantage when used against a wall but puts on a delightful show of yellow blooms that stand out against the silvery gray foliage.

OPENNESS OF the tree or shrub is important when creating the pattern you want plus the shrub's ability to take shaping readily. The Wormwood Senna will take shaping beautifully.

It is by nature neat, rather rounding to about six or eight feet high, quite open and feathery. It is an excellent companion plant to the Black-eyed Heather because they are somewhat the same general appearance — although the Wormwood Senna is not sprawling and dense like the Heather—and as the Heather blooms begin to brown and look somewhat ragged, the Wormwood Senna draws the eye with its bright yellow, fragrant flowers. The foliage color contrast also is pleasant.

It's Time You Put The Plants To Bed

One of the wonderful things about our climate is the long planting and growing seasons it permits.

Spring usually arrives early and summer stays late. Thus we have an unusual opportunity to make the most of bedding plants.

What are bedding plants?

Generally we mean annuals or plants that are treated as annuals to create mass color or display. However, vegetables can well be considered bedding plants as far as the home gardener is concerned.

Bedding plants, both flowers and vegetables, have this in common, they respond best to good soil. By good soil we mean soil at least a foot deep that has plenty of humus in it, or organic matter if that term means more to you.

THE SOIL should drain well yet have plenty of tiny sponges (provided by the organic matter) to blot up and hold the water so plant roots can take it up as needed. In such soil you should be able to grow with the greatest of ease and with the most brilliant results nearly any of the annuals and vegetables.

The other thing nearly all bedding plants have in common—they want sun.

Some annuals are easily started from seed placed directly in the ground, but others are best bought in plant bands or by the flat from nurseries.

Nowadays, nurserymen carry a large selection of bedding plants already started from seed and ready to plant. These will be strong, healthy little plants and to insure that they continue that way, ask the nurseryman for some type of transplanting solution to be used at the time these plants are moved from the flat to the planting bed. They usually give you a vitamin-hormone combination that not only helps the plants overcome any shock of being moved but gets them started on their way to maximum growth and productivity.

MOST OF the vegetables you'll want to start from seed because they are so easy to grow and there's nothing quite as fascinating as watching the tiny shoots poke through the ground and spring up almost hour by hour with a magic only nature knows. Children should be given a chance to plant some quick-emerging seed as they usually are even more impatient for action than their parents.

Among the vegetables you can plant right now from seed are parsley, beets, peas, beans, chard, carrots, corn, squash of all sorts, cucumbers, melons, potatoes, spinach, turnips, lettuce (although you can get plants of lettuce and chard if you prefer not to start them from seed).

Among the flowers it is best to start from seed are the California poppy, clarkia, Sweet Alyssum, godetia, sweet pea, nasturtium, lineria or baby snapdragons, Virginia stock.

NATURALLY, you can start any of the annuals from seed, but for the busy home gardener it is easier and quicker to get the plants of such things as zinnias, pansies, violas, petunias, snapdragons, marigolds — the list is too long to print so check your nursery.

If your soil is good and well-drained, all you have to do is pop the plants into the ground at the level they were growing in the flats, water them in well, using a dose of the transplanting solution. If it is particularly warm when you put the plants in, it is wise to give them some sort of shelter for a few days until they get going.

Nurseries sell hotcaps already made up but you can make little caps very quickly out of newspapers that will do very well.

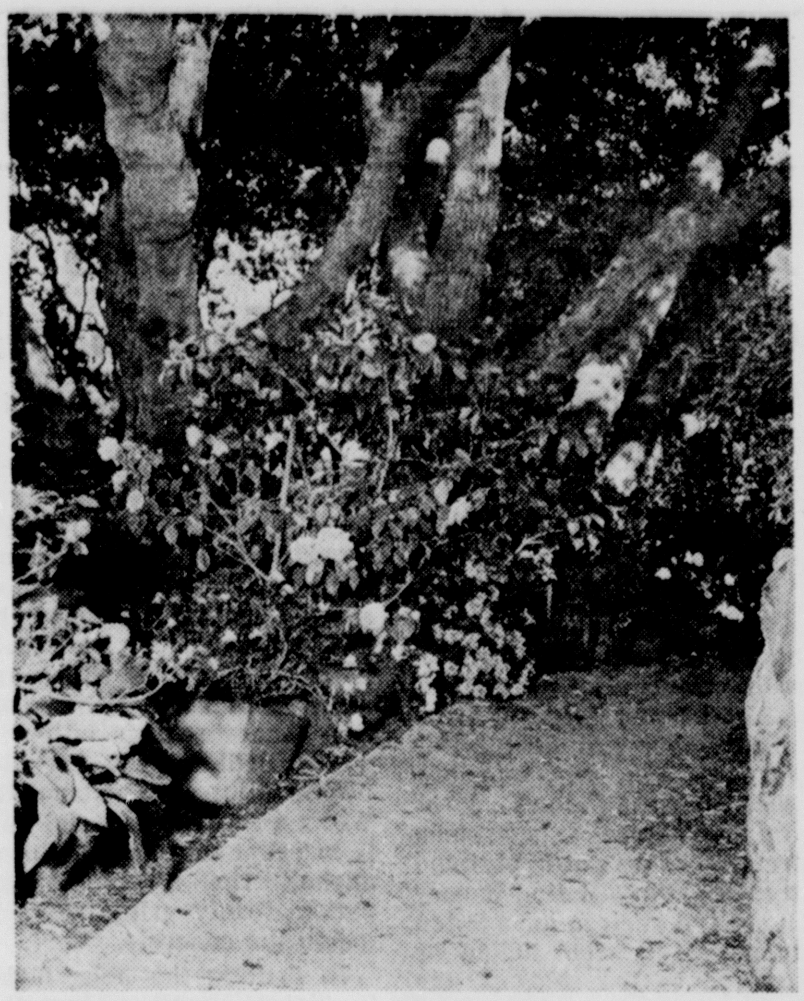
If you do not have good drainage, it is wise to make raised beds — which simply means you heap up the soil to six inches above the ground level and slant the sides in slightly. You don't need to put in bulwarks or anything fancy and if you keep your beds about three feet wide you find your plants grow just right for planting, watering and picking without strain.

WHEN YOU select your flowers and lay out your beds, remember that you should have enough of the same variety and color of a plant to make a real showing.

Solid colors are best for massing, otherwise you should use a larger number of the same if they are varicolored plants. Five cinerarias of white; five petunias of red; five marigolds of a rich orange can live together if need be. But a solid bed of petunias with a border of Dwarf Marigolds might be much better and show both flowers to advantage.

The go-together effect should be considered before you plant. In this regard, landscape architects say that reds, oranges and deep yellows are "hot"colors, cheering to the eye and heart and tend to "come close" to you. Pinks, roses, pastels and blue are "cool" colors, tend to make a garden seem bigger. Blood-red, lavender, purple and white are best used as contrast colors to bring out the best in some of the other colors.

THERE ARE only a few cultural directions necessary for success with these eager-to-grow bedding plants. Water deeply and infrequently; give the plants regular light feedings of plant food about every three weeks; keep flowers picked. This last is extremely important because annuals want to bolt to seed and stop blooming. Keep picking and they bloom more.



HERE IN CLOSE proximity to each other along a garden walk, and with a few azalea plants among them, grow just a few of the hundreds of different kinds of camellias that flourish in the yard of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Paterson of Los Ranchitos. Despite the size of their collection, the Patersons continue to acquire more camellias when they happen upon a particularly promising specimen, or upon a variety not yet represented in their garden.

IN ONE OF THE windier sections of the Paterson garden, stakes help support the camellia plants. The glossy, year-round foliage of the camellia, Hugh Paterson feels, is as much an asset as the beautiful blooms.

AN ACRE OF CAMELLIAS

With Hundreds Of Fine Plants, The Patersons Are Still Adding

species not commonly cultivated in the United States.

"Generally," he says, "they are the kind that would be of little interest to anyone except a 'camellia nut.' The flowers are usually inconspicuous, and many are not even recognizable as camellias."

WHY WAS it that the Patersons chose camellias when they decided to go into floral gardening in a big way?

Paterson lists these reasons:

1. Camellias are relatively easy to grow if you give them some partial shade.
2. They are free from most pests.
3. The foliage remains nice and glossy the year around.
4. And there are, of course, those colorful blooms ranging from a dignified attractiveness to a showy gorgeousness.

"And if you select your varieties with care, you can have blooms from October into May," Paterson adds.

MOST OF the Paterson camellias are growing in containers.

"There are two reasons for that," he says. "First, we have more plants than we have ground for planting. And second, since our property slopes rather sharply, retainers of redwood, concrete or some such material must be installed to prevent washing before camellias can be planted in the earth. And we simply haven't had enough time for that."

Paterson has this to say to the novice camellia grower:

"You should keep in mind that camellias are shade plants, shallow and finely rooted so that they are unable to store food or water, and requiring very good drainage.

"IN OTHER words, you just can't take a young camellia home, dig a little hole in the adobe, stick the plant in it, and expect it to grow."

Paterson also has this admonition: "Do not let petals that have been pruned from or have fallen off the camellia bush lie on the ground."

To do so, he explains, invites trouble with a fungus called petal blight.

This menace first came to this country about 15 years ago from Japan, he says.

WHEN PETALS are allowed to lie on the ground, the fungus develops and moves into the ground. The following spring, "little mushroom-like growths" will sprout, sending out spores to attack that year's camellias.

The Patersons generally find it more convenient to snip faded blooms from the bush — "thereby doing our pruning as well" — rather than wait for the flowers to drop onto the ground. This is especially true, he says, of those varieties whose flowers burst upon striking the ground. thus complicating the job of stooping and collecting the old blooms.

But if you prefer to wait until the flowers have dropped, Paterson adds, do not long delay the chore of picking them up.

"CAMELLIA petals do not make a good mulch for camellia plants," he says, "and prevention of the petal blight is far easier than treatment, once you have an infestation."

"Spray the ground—not the plant—with it several times a year to kill off fungus before it comes out above ground," he advises. "And then, pick up those petals religiously."

Finally, Paterson says, camellias prefer overhead spray, since such watering is similar to the natural rainfall upon which they depend in their native Asian forests. And they like lots of watering, since they cannot store moisture.

A BRISK spray also serves to wash bugs and other pests from the foliage, he points out.

When the Patersons were still teaching school, they arose early in the mornings to work in the garden before leaving for school. After school, they returned to their chores among the camellias. And their weekends, too, were devoted to the care of their fast-growing collection of plants.

Since both retired from teaching two years ago, they now have more "leisure" time to devote to the camellias.

"But still, we're a little bit like the farmer with a herd of cows. We can't just go off and leave our plants for a week or so without arranging for some one to tend them," Paterson says.

KEN BECKER, a College of Marin student and a neighbor who has worked with the Patersons in their yard, now takes over the camellia care chores in their absence.

The loving attention they lavish upon several hundred prized plants might seem like a formidable, even impossible, task to many green thumbers hard-put to keep pace with a couple of rose bushes and a row of petunias.

But for the Patersons, it has been a hobby that has enriched their retirement years.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

- Nearly all of your plants will want a feeding now. Ask a nurseryman to give you advice on special feeding problems. Otherwise, plants respond beautifully to almost any complete plant food.
- Roses need plenty of water to produce the maximum bloom. Soak them deeply once a week, a little oftener if your soil is very sandy.
- Lift and divide cannas. And set out pansies and violas for almost instant color. Nurseries have the plants ready to set out.
- Fuchsias should be pinched back frequently to encourage bushiness and new wood that will bear blooms.
- Another planting of gladiolus can go in now. And put in your dahlias if you haven't done so as yet.

PERFECT FOR bedrooms is a tall, narrow corner window which gives excellent light and view to the outside without impairing privacy. Handsome window lines are emphasized here by framing of two-by-six Douglas fir, finished a soft nutmeg shade to match the fir wall paneling. Decorative roller shade is best for this type of window. It can be installed without detracting from window design, but gives good enclosure at nighttime.

Are You Letting Valuable Garage Space Go To Waste?

Stand in the center of your garage (when the car isn't there) and make a complete, slow turn.

Look at all that wall space going to waste.

Almost any type of available lumber will do for this purpose. You can use plywood strips if desired . . . or you may happen to have some scrap pieces of plywood around. You will find it easy to set the shelves on wooden or metal supports nailed or screwed to the sides of the studs.

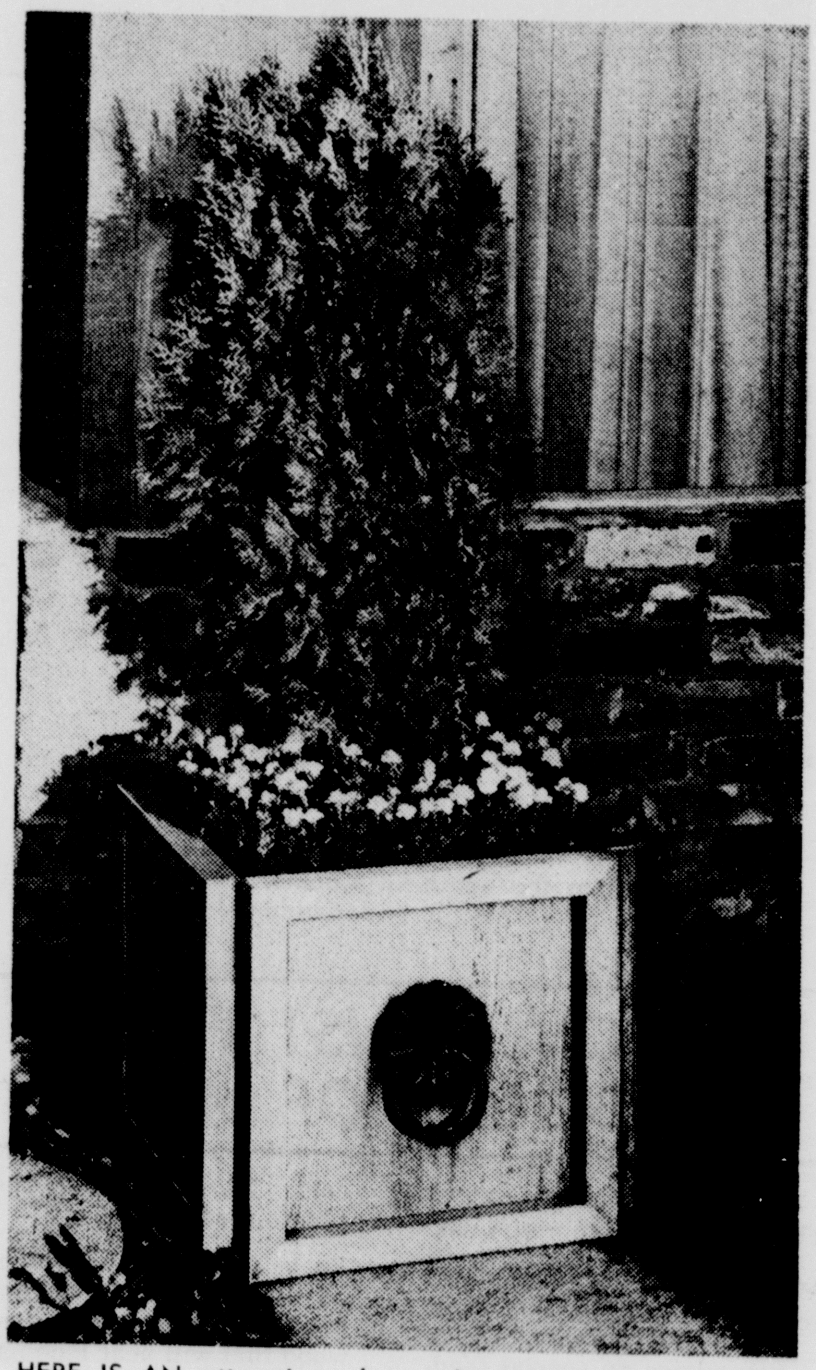
Tools, garden implements and the like can be hung from metal hooks set into the perforations of hardboard. The hardboard is easily attached to the studding. In the event that the inside of your garage is finished . . . that is, it has a flat-surfaced wall . . . you will have to attach furring strips in order to make use of perforated hardboard.

IF YOU DO not do this there will be no space behind the hardboard panels to insert the metal hooks.

If the inside walls of your garage are concrete or some form of masonry, attachments will be more difficult than with wood. Masonry shields or anchors may be the answer. These are small, hollow receptacles which are inserted in holes drilled into the concrete with either a power drill with a carbide-tipped bit or with a star drill. When a screw or special bolt is inserted into the shield or anchor, the receptacle expands, firmly gripping itself inside the concrete.

In drilling the hole, make it slightly smaller than the shield or anchor, which is tapped into place to make a snug fit.

MASONRY NAILS also can be used. These are hammered into the concrete like ordinary nails, but require strong blows. Some of the new epoxy adhesives permit the attachment of wood or other materials directly to the concrete. Furring strips or studding are hammered onto nails sticking out from the metal squares.



HERE IS AN attractive planter box that is based on a simple modular design using California redwood and redwood plywood. It is an 18-inch cube which can be expanded to a larger size if desired. Several such boxes used along a patio or entryway wall make a handsome grouping. Casters can be added so the boxes can easily be moved about. Because redwood resists weathering and will last virtually a lifetime, even under the most adverse conditions, it is a marvelous material for construction of planter boxes. Complete detailed plans with working drawings, a materials list and step-by-step assembly photographs may be obtained by sending 50 cents to cover cost of postage and handling to Simpson Timber Co., 2102 Washington Building, Seattle 1, Wash.

Lucy, Bob Team Up For Fun

HOLLYWOOD—Bob Hope, just off a plane from Washington, D.C., walked onto a sound stage at Desilu studios to start rehearsals for a television special with Lucille Ball, took a quick look at Miss Ball's rehearsal blouse covered with meaningless words, and said, "Lucy, honey, if you're going to wear a cue sheet, why not put my lines on it?"

From that moment on, the rehearsing and filming of the "Lucille Ball Comedy Hour" with special guest star Hope was more fun for both the stars and onlookers than the proverbial barrel of simians.

The program, a comedy play, will be seen on CBS-TV (KPIX-TV) tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the spot usually occupied by the Ed Sullivan show.

SINCE MISS Ball and Hope have made four movies and several TV spectaculars together, they know how to have fun on any production and wind up with a highly-successful bit of film. Hope usually leads the way in comedic quips and Lucy happily tosses back straight lines and roars with laughter.

When, for example, a scene was made showing the approach of motherhood for Lucy, the stage was stacked with baby presents supposedly sent from fans of Miss Ball, who plays the kind of TV star she is in real life.

When Bob finished the scene, he ogled the infant items and cracked, "Looks like Bing Crosby's backyard, doesn't it?"

AT ONE point during rehearsal with Bob and rotund Jack Weston, Lucy said, "Now if tubby will move back." Bob asked, "You mean him, don't you?" Lucy retorted, "I meant you, buster." Bob shook his head. "I haven't been so insulted since I left vaudeville."

Throughout rehearsals, Bob carried a golf club and swung it liberally between scenes until a back stroke struck the side of the set. "Quick, anybody have a band-aid?" screamed Lucy. "For me or the wall?" asked Hope.

When Jack finally admitted, "You're right, doll," Hope raised his voice. "You're my kind of director. Pliable. Now, if we can only have a limber producer."

IN EACH of the four movies Lucy and Bob have made, they played love scenes. In one, "Facts of Life," a Desilu movie, they smooched a whole day in an open car during a rain storm. Their last scene together in this Ball-Hope program was played in a drenching downpour.

Shaking himself like a wet poodle, Hope complained, "This studio always tries to drown me. I wonder if my contract signs me for an aquacade."
